NoFap Doesn't Give You Superpowers

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Nov 10, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/kkpCr9sXwh0 Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter argues NoFap has no special benefits for most people — it only returns chronic porn/masturbation addicts back to a normal baseline, and mistaking that recovery for "superpowers" is a fundamental misunderstanding.

📑 Contents

- 🎯 The Core Claim: NoFap Is Not a Cheat Code
- 📖 The Think and Grow Rich Misinterpretation
- ⚠️ The One Case Where NoFap Actually Makes Sense
- 🔄 Why NoFap Converts Preach So Hard

🎯 The Core Claim: NoFap Is Not a Cheat Code 0:00

- Carter openly admits he "clowns" people who do NoFap
  - His reasoning is rooted in biographical research, not opinion alone
  - He says he has read hundreds of biographies of famous, successful people
    - Not a single one attributes financial success to abstaining from masturbation
- The premise that NoFap unlocks superpowers is flatly rejected

📖 The Think and Grow Rich Misinterpretation 0:00

- NoFap proponents frequently cite the "sex transmutation" chapter in Think and Grow Rich by Napoleon Hill
  - Carter argues this is a total misinterpretation of what that chapter actually means
  - He does not elaborate further in this clip, but frames it as a widely shared error among the NoFap community

⚠️ The One Case Where NoFap Actually Makes Sense 0:22

- Carter concedes there is a legitimate use case for NoFap
  - If someone is watching porn "all day every day" — chronic, excessive consumption — they should stop
  - The mechanism he describes:
    - Chronic pornography and masturbation waste all of a person's dopamine
    - Depleted dopamine means insufficient drive and motivation

    - Quitting restores dopamine function and, with it, normal drive
- His framing: if you are even asking yourself "should I do NoFap?", the answer is probably yes — because the question itself signals overconsumption

🔄 Why NoFap Converts Preach So Hard 0:22

- Chronic users quit, feel dramatically better, and attribute the improvement to something extraordinary
    - They make YouTube videos, preach about it, and claim superpowers
    - Carter's reframe: "Hey dumb ass, you just normal now. You just became a regular [person]."

> The perceived "superpower" is simply the feeling of being a functional human being after recovering from self-imposed dopamine depletion — not an enhancement above baseline.