Be ok with being your biggest fan #businessgrowth #motivation #sucessjourney #greglav #moonshot

Channel: Greg Lav · Published: Nov 09, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/p8_6TNddgGI Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Greg Lav describes surviving years of failure by being his own sole supporter, forcing himself forward daily, until early wins created an addictive momentum that became its own fuel.

📑 Contents

- 🌑 The Dark Years: Being Your Own Only Fan
- ⚡ The Turning Point: First Wins and Addictive Momentum

🌑 The Dark Years: Being Your Own Only Fan 0:00

- There were years with absolutely no motivation because everything was going wrong
  - During this period, he was the only person clapping for himself — no external validation, no support
- He had to force himself out of bed every morning to attempt the hard tasks
  - Key discipline: refusing to let his mood or feelings dictate what he would do that day
    - This separation of emotion from action was the core survival mechanism during the low period

> "I was the only person clapping for myself."

⚡ The Turning Point: First Wins and Addictive Momentum 0:22

- Once he started achieving small wins, everything shifted — it felt like an unlimited energy pill
- He speaks directly to creators, referencing the specific highs of the content world:
  - The feeling of a clip going viral
  - Brand deals arriving as a downstream result of that visibility
- The key insight: even setting money aside, the feeling of winning is what becomes most addictive
  - That initial momentum, however small, is described as "the most addictive and best feeling in the world"
- Takeaway: endure the solo, thankless grind long enough to get that first taste of momentum — it self-perpetuates from there