You can build the skills. You need the hunger first.

Channel: Greg Lav · Published: Nov 10, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/Lq5F6loHwms Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

In the early stages of building a business team, skip chasing top talent — find hungry, hardworking people instead. Raw drive and young energy will outperform experienced competitors.

📑 Contents

- 🔥 Hire for Hunger, Not Skill
- ⚡ Leverage Young Energy as a Competitive Advantage

🔥 Hire for Hunger, Not Skill 0:00

- The core question: how do you build a team and audience to grow a business exponentially?
- "You're not going to attract A players at first" — accept this reality in the early stages
  - Instead of chasing top-tier talent, go after the hungriest people you can find
  - Hunger matters more than existing skills because skills can be built, but drive is harder to teach
- Lead by example — show your team what to do rather than just directing them
- Prioritize hard workers above all else in the early stages

⚡ Leverage Young Energy as a Competitive Advantage 0:22

- Embrace "young energy" as a genuine business asset
- The claim: you can beat more established, older competitors purely through relentless energy and work ethic
  - Directly stated: "You'll beat all these 40-year-olds just through your young energy. For real."
- The implication: experience and credentials are not the deciding factor early on — intensity and hustle are