A Brilliant $20,000,000/Month Shopify Niche Store

Channel: Arie Scherson · Published: Nov 04, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jKBAaWrxzqo Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Micro Ingredients scaled to ~$20M/month by dominating TikTok Shop and Amazon while running a relatively weak Shopify store. The video dissects their multi-platform strategy, ad creative style, and shows how to legally replicate their best hooks using AI.

📑 Contents

- 🏪 Introduction to Micro Ingredients & Traffic Overview
- 🎵 TikTok Shop: The Core Revenue Engine
- 📦 Amazon: 8 Figures a Month
- 📱 Meta Ads Strategy & Creative Style
- ⚠️ Warning on Copying & How to Ethically Borrow Hooks with AI
- 🛒 Shopify Store Analysis & Subscription/Bundle Strategy

🏪 Introduction to Micro Ingredients & Traffic Overview 0:00

- Micro Ingredients is a supplement/ingredients brand that has scaled to approximately $20 million per month in total revenue
- Their Shopify store receives roughly 234,000 monthly visitors — but Arie notes traffic data tools are estimates, not exact figures
  - He emphasizes he cross-references multiple data sources to form the most accurate picture possible
- The Shopify store is explicitly not their main focus or primary revenue channel
- Arie's motivation for making these videos: he runs his own brand (with a partner) and uses this research for his own scaling goals, plus to share with his audience
  - He previously ran a Meta ads agency and reached the highest tier of Meta agency partner status

🎵 TikTok Shop: The Core Revenue Engine 1:07

- TikTok Shop is where Micro Ingredients is doing the majority of its volume — described as their primary "game"
- Total TikTok Shop lifetime revenue: $262 million
- Their current top-performing product on TikTok Shop: a magnesium complex product specifically marketed to women
  - This product alone has done over $1 million in the last 30 days on TikTok Shop

- They run frequent live streams on TikTok — their calendar is packed with scheduled live streams throughout the month
  - This live-stream-heavy strategy is very different from a typical Meta-first brand playbook
- Arie's takeaway: rather than choosing between Meta and TikTok Shop, consider running both simultaneously
  - "Some people tell you to double down on Meta. Some people tell you to double down on TikTok Shop. But why not both?"
- He flags that heavy TikTok Shop traffic also has a meaningful halo effect on Amazon sales

📦 Amazon: 8 Figures a Month 2:57

- Micro Ingredients is doing 8 figures per month on Amazon alone — this is the primary basis for the $20M/month total estimate
- Nearly every SKU they sell is moving 20,000+ units per month on Amazon
- Arie observes this pattern is extremely common in health and beauty:
  - Driving traffic to TikTok Shop or Shopify via Meta ads generates significant spillover Amazon sales
  - Consumers discover a brand on social, then search and buy on Amazon out of habit or convenience

📱 Meta Ads Strategy & Creative Style 3:21

- Micro Ingredients has 420 active ads running on Meta, all directing to their Shopify store
- Notable products being advertised on Meta:
  - NAD product — described as a "really big" performer
  - Pumpkin seed oil product — sold on subscription, has performed very well
- Many of their TikTok-originated video ads are being repurposed and run on Meta
- Dominant creative format: "yapper ads"
  - Definition: a person talking directly and candidly to the camera in a conversational, relatable way
  - Example ad hook: "Black men, I need y'all to listen to me for a second" — highly targeted demographic messaging
  - Another example: a 36-second video starting with a pattern-interrupt hook ("you ever pause a video like — hold up, what just happened?") then transitioning into a story
  - Ad copy example for a hair loss product: "Tired of seeing more hair in the drain than on your head. Dreading the shower drain again." — emotionally resonant, relatable language
- The yapper format works because it mimics organic content and leans into relatable pain points

⚠️ Warning on Copying & How to Ethically Borrow Hooks with AI 4:30

- Many dropshippers use Micro Ingredients as a direct copy-paste launchpad — copying branding, products, and everything

    - Arie strongly advises against this: "I think there's going to be a lot of trouble that comes from doing that in the future"
    - Recommendation: be creative, make your own product even if inspired by brands like this
- Instead, Arie demonstrates how to ethically borrow the hook structure using AI tools:
- Step-by-step process to replicate a winning ad hook:
    - Step 1 — Go to Facebook Ad Library and find a high-performing video from the brand you're studying; copy the link
    - Step 2 — Use a free Meta ads video downloader (search Google for one) to download the video — Arie also mentions Playout.com as an option
    - Step 3 — Go to higsfield.ai/mcp to add the Higsfield tool as a plugin inside ChatGPT
    - Step 4 — Extract key frames from the downloaded video (e.g., the first frame, an impactful mid-video frame)
    - Step 5 — Upload those frames into ChatGPT with the Higsfield MCP plugin active
    - Step 6 — Prompt ChatGPT to modify the creative: change the product in the actor's hand to your product (upload a reference image), change demographic details (e.g., age), change the spoken line to match your hook
    - Step 7 — Generate the video or image; iterate on the output by adjusting the reference image or prompt for more variation
- Models available through Higsfield MCP (not limited to ChatGPT's native generation):
    - Cling 2.5 (ByteDance) — for video
    - Google Gemini / Google VO
    - Grok Image
    - Nano Banana Pro
    - Gemini Omniflash
- Arie's live demo result: a generated video of a woman saying "Do not take this right here" holding his product — described as "incredibly real" looking
    - He notes he'd iterate further by changing the actor's appearance more substantially using a new reference image

    > The key insight: you can extract the structure and emotion of a $200M brand's winning hook and apply it to your own product in seconds using AI — without copying their brand or product.

- Arie also mentions Claude as another AI option but says he personally uses ChatGPT
- For health and beauty product manufacturing help, he points to his own website: aco (his consulting/resources site)

🛒 Shopify Store Analysis & Subscription/Bundle Strategy 7:35

- Arie's overall assessment: Micro Ingredients' Shopify store is their weakest channel and they are clearly not prioritizing it
  - "Their Shopify store is definitely lacking in my opinion. I think they could be doing much better here."
- Despite this, he sees Shopify as one of the most powerful places to send traffic because of two key monetization levers:
  - Subscriptions — ability to build monthly recurring revenue (MRR) that compounds over time
  - Bundle offers — increase average order value by grouping complementary products
    - He notes one of their bundle listings doesn't appear to be working properly and needs to be updated
- The subscription + bundle model is harder to execute natively on TikTok Shop or Amazon, making Shopify uniquely valuable for LTV optimization
- Arie closes with a half-joking offer: if anyone from the Micro Ingredients team is watching, he'd love to consult with them to improve their Shopify presence
- Final takeaway: Micro Ingredients is an exceptional brand, but their success is built almost entirely on TikTok Shop + Amazon, with Shopify as an underleveraged asset that represents significant upside