Why I'm a LeBron James Fan

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Nov 03, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/b9_WV4qZj4s Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter argues LeBron James deserves respect as a role model because managing $100 million, global fame, and elite status at age 18 — with no scandals or arrests — is a genuinely rare and admirable achievement.

📑 Contents

- 🏀 LeBron's Place Among the Greats
- 💰 The $100 Million at 18 Test
- ✅ Why LeBron Passes the Test

🏀 LeBron's Place Among the Greats 0:00

- Carter openly identifies as a LeBron fan and considers him one of the greatest players of all time
- On the Jordan vs. LeBron debate:
  - Carter personally believes Jordan is the GOAT
  - However, he would not attack anyone who argues LeBron is better than Jordan
  - He acknowledges LeBron has built a "strong case" for himself
- Notes that LeBron receives a lot of hate, particularly from Carter's conservative friends
  - Carter mentions most of his friends are conservative, attributing this to his own wealth

💰 The $100 Million at 18 Test 0:23

- Carter frames his admiration around a thought experiment: how would you handle LeBron's circumstances at 18?
  - Nike gave LeBron $100 million at age 18
  - Along with that came massive fame and social status
- Carter turns the question on himself as a benchmark:
  - He estimates he personally would have fathered children with "50 or 60" different women
  - He says flatly: "I don't think I would have survived"
  - His assessment: an 18-year-old version of himself with $100 million would have been "a danger to myself and everyone around me"

✅ Why LeBron Passes the Test 0:47

- Carter's core argument: LeBron received extraordinary money, fame, and status at an extremely young age and handled it with discipline
  - No major scandals
  - Never arrested
  - No children with multiple different mothers
- Conclusion: given how rare that level of self-control is at 18, Carter believes LeBron is "a great role model"

> "I think 18-year-old me with $100 million — I would have been a danger to myself and everyone around me."