There's a lot that happens that scales Bloom to the moon that we don't own

Channel: Greg Lav · Published: Nov 04, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/MTgqwkYyHE4 Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Greg Lav, founder of Bloom, built a major energy drink brand in 2.5 years at age 31 by relying entirely on third-party manufacturers, warehouses, and distributors — with zero vertical integration.

📑 Contents

- 🏭 The Old Way vs. The New Way of Building a Brand
- 🤝 Bloom's Fully Outsourced Infrastructure
- 🚀 The Result: Rapid Scale Without Ownership

🏭 The Old Way vs. The New Way of Building a Brand 0:00

- In the era of their parents' generation (circa 1999), building a product company required owning everything
  - Your own factories
  - Your own shipping and logistics facilities
- In 2026, the landscape is fundamentally different
  - Highly sophisticated external partners are now readily available
  - Founders can plug into existing infrastructure rather than build it from scratch

🤝 Bloom's Fully Outsourced Infrastructure 0:00

- Bloom has never owned a single warehouse
- Bloom has never owned a single factory
- There is zero vertical integration of any kind
- Key third-party partners used:
  - Dr Pepper trucks for distribution
  - Third-party warehouses for storage
  - Third-party factories for manufacturing

🚀 The Result: Rapid Scale Without Ownership 0:23

- Greg is 31 years old and built a company he describes as a "giant energy drink company"

- Achieved this scale in just 2.5 years
- Core thesis: this is how modern brands are run by founders in their 30s
- Outsourcing infrastructure is the mechanism that enables unlimited upward growth

> "In 2026, you have very sophisticated external partners, and that's what Bloom decided to lean into."