🔌 Is a Trade Career Worth It? 0:00

- A viewer asks Brandon's opinion on pursuing a skilled trade, specifically electrical work
- Brandon's overall take: it's not a bad idea at all
  - Key point: "Without electricians, none of us could see any of these things" — trades are genuinely essential
  - He does not dismiss the idea or look down on trade work

💡 The Wealth Caveat 0:20

- Brandon draws a distinction between a decent living and getting rich
  - If the goal is wealth, electrical work may not be the most direct path
  - He doesn't say it's impossible, just that the ceiling and opportunity may be more limited compared to other fields
- He uses his own background to stay humble and non-judgmental
  - "I used to train people at a gym — who am I to stop you from pursuing electrical work?"
  - Implies he also started in a modest, unglamorous role before finding bigger opportunities

🚀 The "Start Somewhere" Philosophy 0:20

- Core message: starting matters more than starting perfectly
  - Getting into the workforce — even in a trade — is a legitimate and acceptable first step
  - "Maybe you need to start working first, and that's completely fine"

- The implicit framework: begin where you can → build momentum → later pivot toward higher-opportunity paths if wealth becomes the priority
- No hard "don't do it" — the advice is conditional on personal goals, not a blanket judgment
