You're waiting to feel ready before you start. But starting is what makes you ready.

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Oct 30, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/EFZDA7fbiIc Source: description only

📋 Executive Summary

The feeling of readiness doesn't come before action — it comes from action. Waiting for the perfect moment is the obstacle itself; starting is the only path to confidence.

📑 Contents

- 🚦 The Readiness Trap
- ✅ Starting as the Solution

🚦 The Readiness Trap

- Most people delay starting something because they are waiting to feel ready first.
  - This creates an indefinite loop — the feeling of readiness rarely arrives on its own.

✅ Starting as the Solution

- Starting is not the reward for feeling ready — it is the cause of feeling ready.
  - Action builds the competence, familiarity, and confidence that readiness actually consists of.

> The only way to feel ready is to begin before you do.