- 🚪 Perk 1: Skip the Line with Private Entry
- 📦 Perk 2: Early Access to New Collections
- 🥂 Perk 3: Private Events and High-Net-Worth Networking
- 💡 The Bigger Point

🚪 Perk 1: Skip the Line with Private Entry 0:00

- Louis Vuitton's Fifth Avenue location always has a large line outside and a waitlist to enter
  - As a VIP client, Brandon bypasses this entirely
  - He texts the store ahead of his visit to let them know he's coming
  - He is then directed in through the back entrance — no line, no wait

📦 Perk 2: Early Access to New Collections 0:22

- Preferred customers receive information about new drops before they are publicly announced
  - Brandon finds out about new collections before they appear on the internet
  - The store texts him directly when a new collection is released
  - This gives him the opportunity to purchase items before they sell out

🥂 Perk 3: Private Events and High-Net-Worth Networking 0:22

- Luxury stores host private parties and events that are not open to the general public
  - VIP clients are placed on an exclusive guest list for these gatherings
  - Attendees tend to be high-net-worth individuals
  - Brandon met someone at one of these events and closed a business deal
    - That single deal generated over $100,000

💡 The Bigger Point 0:45

- Brandon's core takeaway: luxury store VIP status isn't just about appearance or showing off clothes

> "It's not all about flexing with the clothes. Sometimes it's about getting exclusive access and putting yourself in position to get different opportunities."

- The real value lies in access and positioning — being in rooms with people who can create business opportunities
