Brand Overview & Revenue Estimate 0:00

- Brand: Dog is Human — a daily multivitamin supplement for dogs
- Revenue estimate: $2M+/month, potentially nine figures annually
 - Based on 500,000 monthly visitors, predominantly from the US
 - Arie's agency experience managing large e-commerce ad budgets informs this estimate
 - Likely higher because they've been stacking subscribers for a long time
- Funding: raised a pre-seed round of $1.2 million in 2022, starting essentially from zero
- Key competitive moat: they trademarked their specific supplement formula
 - Provides a legal moat against competitors
 - Signals credibility — going out of the way to trademark a formula implies it works and required significant R&D
 - Arie notes this as something he's applying to his own brand
- Subscription is the default purchase option — identified as one of the primary drivers of rapid scaling
 - Stacking subscribers compounds LTV (lifetime value) over time

Landing Page Strategy 1:56

- Landing page is intentionally simple and visually clean — not overbuilt
- Core benefits displayed are: long-term health, skin and coat, hip and joint, digestion
- Design principle: no long sentences anywhere on the page
 - People skim headlines — they do not read dense paragraphs
 - Many Shopify store owners make the mistake of copying ChatGPT output directly, creating text-heavy descriptions nobody reads
- Standard elements present: FAQ section, customer reviews
- Lesson: simplicity converts — communicate benefits in the fewest possible words

Meta Ads & TikTok: The Core Marketing Engine 3:03

- The combination of Meta ads + TikTok is the backbone of the business
- Most brands do one or the other — either Meta ads only, or organic TikTok only
 - This is a mistake: the two platforms feed each other
- Meta ads are running TikTok-style 9:16 vertical videos — literally using TikTok fonts, likely repurposed from TikTok content
- Top ads sorted by highest impressions reveal two formats:
 - Video ads — storytelling, TikTok-native format
 - Static ads — strong direct response, problem-aware targeting with deal callouts
- Even as a venture-backed brand, they remain scrappy with ad creative and aggressive with spend
 - Example: static ads say
