

How Instagram Larping got me a rotation

Channel: Deni Ops · Published: Sep 27, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=J1a3z6wyOoM> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Deni reveals how a deliberately constructed Instagram profile — mixing real, AI-generated, and stolen photos — produces 3–5 dates per week, a 78% close rate, and near-zero flaking, while outperforming traditional dating apps and phone-number game.

Profile Grid Theory & What to Post 1:34

- The grid should make a girl hold her phone at arm's length and think "his life looks sick, I want to be part of that"
- Variety is everything — never repeat the same type of photo
 - Every picture should have its own distinct role
 - Too many of one type (e.g., all selfies, all car shots, all travel) actively repulses women
- Recommended grid formula:
 - Clothed / styled outfit photo ("fit picture")
 - Social/event photo — proves you go out and have a life
 - Travel/holiday photo — one of the highest-appeal niches for women
 - Shirtless photo — Deni combined this with a holiday shot
 - Candid face shot — natural, not posed
 - Mirror photo — looks real and unpolished on purpose
 - Back photo — optional physique display
 - Gym photo — reinforces fitness without looking too staged

- Contrasting colors across the grid make the overall profile look visually striking
- Highlights should reflect genuine (or constructed) hobbies:
 - Cars, travel, cooking, gaming setup — whatever fits your life
 - Example: "French Cuisine" highlight with food you made; "Italian" highlight with a plated dish
 - If your real hobby won't appeal to the girls you want, fabricate highlights for hobbies that do

Using AI & "Larped" Photos 1:53

- Deni openly uses AI-generated images alongside real photos
 - Examples used: Mayfair/London shot, Italy shot, Paris boat shot — all AI or taken from other people's content online
 - "Totally my Paris boat shot, right? Stole it from this guy."
- You can run a fully AI profile if you have no usable real photos
 - Mix of real + AI is fine; real photos used when available
- Travel photos are especially easy to generate and have high female appeal
 - "Just generate it if you're too poor to go on holiday. Trust me, there's no excuse."
- A concert/rave photo was sourced from someone else to signal sociability
 - Deni admits he dislikes concerts but posts the image because women respond positively to it
 - "Because I have a picture of me at that concert, girls respond to me very positively — 'this guy is sociable and has a life outside of work.'"
- Authenticity of individual photos matters far less than the overall impression the grid creates

Storytelling Through Your Profile 7:51

- The profile should tell a coherent narrative about who you are and how you've evolved
 - Deni includes childhood photos showing his overweight, unattractive younger self as a contrast to his current appearance
 - This "glow-up arc" gives women an emotional story to connect with
- Girls build fantasies from what they see — they compare him to characters like Massimo from 365 Days
- A strong profile lets women "read your character" from posts — clothing style, personality, lifestyle — before ever speaking to you
- You are essentially pre-selling yourself before any conversation begins

Two Core Instagram Dating Strategies 9:25

- Strategy 1: Pure Instagram cold approach (no dating apps needed)
 - Find a girl on Instagram, send a follow request, and once she accepts, post a cool story
 - Opening line example: "Are you new to Manchester?" followed by offering to show her around as a "tour guide"

- Other openers: swipe up on her story, leave a like, offer "We can spice up your profile"
- Check her following list — competition is near zero vs. thousands on Tinder
- Result: she can see your full profile immediately, which does the selling for you
- Deni claims this alone generates 3–5 dates per week
- Strategy 2: Move girls from dating apps to Instagram
 - When matched on Hinge or Tinder, give her your Instagram instead of (or alongside) a number
 - Every girl Deni asks for Instagram gives it — "no resistance at all"
 - She views the full profile → attraction and trust spike → much less likely to flake
 - Useful secondary benefit: if she doubted you were real from AI Hinge photos, the Instagram (with additional real photos) confirms your existence and she opens up fast

Instagram vs. Dating Apps & Phone Numbers 11:14

- Deni's self-reported close/show-up rates:

Platform	Close / Meet-up Rate
Instagram	78%
iMessage / WhatsApp	63%

- Instagram's advantage over dating apps:
 - Unlimited photos vs. 6–9 on Hinge/Tinder
 - Far less male competition in a girl's DMs vs. her matches queue
 - Profile communicates personality, lifestyle, and story in a way a dating profile cannot
- The phone number method is declared dead
 - Deni story: went on a night out, got a girl's number, saw she had 18 different guys saved in her phone as "future husband" or similar names
 - "Do you really think she's going to reply to you when there's 18 other guys with the same name? No."
 - Instagram sidesteps this entirely — DMs feel more personal and the profile provides social proof upfront

Story Content: What to Actually Post 14:41

- Stories are the engine that keeps girls engaged and chasing
- Content does not need to be glamorous — variety and regularity matter most
 - Car story (real event: police seizing his car on a date) — girls replied asking what happened
 - Meal deal from Tesco held up in front of the road — girls rated his meal deal choice
 - Restaurant pictures (some recycled from years ago)
 - Selfies, driving videos, night-out candid shots
 - Two Lamborghinis parked in Manchester — not his, just an aesthetic photo he took

- "I saw two Lamborghinis parked up, took a picture, and now I look like some cool guy doing cool stuff."
- Pictures from dates (keeping the girl's identity vague)
- Recycling old stories is fine — Deni re-posts content from a year ago
- The goal is simply to appear like a normal, active person with a varied life
 - "You can post your meal deal, bro. Just hold it in front of the road or something."
- Posting stories consistently causes ghosted girls to resurface and re-engage

Pre-Selection & Jealousy Tactics 17:20

- Posting other girls (without showing their faces clearly) on stories and carousel posts triggers jealousy and pursuit
- Deni posted a carousel with:
 - Two photos of himself
 - A girl in his car on a date
 - A second girl in his car
 - A third girl on a date with her Coach handbag visible
- Immediate responses from girls in his pipeline:
 - One girl: "You're like the funniest man ever" then got jealous seeing herself alongside two other women
 - Another: cancelled the rescheduled date in protest — but then kept swiping up on his stories anyway
 - Another: said "I don't think this is going to work" — then wouldn't stop calling him
 - A fourth: saw him at her favourite bar with another girl on his story and then asked "What should we do when we go to Nottingham together?"
- The mechanic: women are attracted to men other women already want
 - Keep the girls in photos vague (no direct tagging, no obvious intimacy) so it reads as ambiguous "friends"
 - "Post your dates. If you keep it vague it makes the girls jealous."

The single biggest insight: a well-built Instagram profile with consistent story posting and visible pre-selection can replace dating apps entirely — and produces a materially higher show-up rate (78% vs. 63%) with far less competition.

Services & Next Steps 20:17

- Deni announces Instagram profile-building as a new paid service alongside existing dating app management
 - Contact via number in the video description or book a call
 - Goal: prove results not just on his own profile but for "average, ordinary" clients

- A separate "mega guide" for full dating app mastery is also available
- Future videos promised covering Instagram game in more depth
 - Viewers encouraged to comment what specific Instagram topics they want covered
