How I Stay Keto at McDonald's

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Oct 25, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/D9kjyOrtB-g Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter shares his simple keto hack for fast food: ditch the bun. He eats 4–6 bunless double cheeseburgers at McDonald's and uses a Spider-Man motivation trick to get his son to eat protein.

📑 Contents

- 🎢 Fan Encounter at Legoland
- 🍔 The Keto Fast Food Strategy
- 🕷️ Getting Kids to Eat Protein

🎢 Fan Encounter at Legoland 0:00

- Brandon was at Legoland with his son when a fan recognized him
  - The fan asked: "Oh, Brandon Carter, how are you brother? Are you here with your family?"
  - Brandon jokingly replied he was just there for his "Lego work"
- The fan posed a practical question that prompted the tip: "How do you maintain your diet when your kids are eating McDonald's or hot dogs?"

🍔 The Keto Fast Food Strategy 0:21

- The answer is simple: remove the bun
  - A bunless hot dog is described as "perfect" for a keto diet
  - Same logic applies to burgers — just discard the bun
- His specific McDonald's order:
  - 4 to 6 Double Cheeseburgers, ordered without the bun (or bun set aside and thrown away)
  - Coke Zero to drink
- His son orders a Happy Meal while Brandon eats his bunless burgers alongside him

🕷️ Getting Kids to Eat Protein 0:42

- His son's instinct is to eat all the French fries first and skip the nuggets
- Brandon's motivational tactic: tie protein to a superhero identity

    - He tells his son: "You need to eat the nuggets because that's where you get protein — that's how you get strong like Spider-Man"
    - After hearing this, the son eats all the nuggets
- Takeaway parenting principle: frame healthy food as the path to becoming the hero your child admires
- Brandon's warning: kids who avoid protein will be weak and unable to compete — "How are they going to keep up on the dodgeball court?"

> The single biggest insight: you don't need a special diet menu to stay keto — just remove the bun anywhere you go.