The hardest time in business

Channel: Tim Luong · Published: Oct 25, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/ZEmIgJgVRm4 Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Tim Luong describes surviving the darkest chapter of his business in 2022 — a multi-month crisis of collapsing ads, crashing markets, and near-bankruptcy — overcome only through relentless daily execution.

📑 Contents

- 🔥 The 2022 Crisis: Everything Falls Apart
- 💪 The Response: Grinding Through the Collapse
- 🌅 The Lesson: Action Over Calculation

🔥 The 2022 Crisis: Everything Falls Apart 0:00

- The hardest period of his business life came in 2022, lasting roughly three to four months
  - He was losing large sums of money from his bank account for three consecutive months
- Multiple compounding failures hit simultaneously:
  - Ads stopped generating results entirely
  - Markets collapsed across the board
  - Sales videos and webinars had to be rebuilt and replaced
  - The sales team stopped performing well
  - A significant spike in refund requests followed
- At the lowest point, the business was two months away from bankruptcy

💪 The Response: Grinding Through the Collapse 0:22

- His videographer, who lived with him at the time, witnessed the daily routine firsthand and later described it to him (Tim says the period feels "hazy" in memory)
  - Woke up every day at 5:00 AM
  - Worked without stopping until 9:00 or 10:00 PM
  - Repeated this schedule every single day for four straight months
- His mindset at the absolute lowest point: > "If this is the end, at least I'll leave while still trying."

🌅 The Lesson: Action Over Calculation 0:44

- He credits survival not to strategy or forecasting, but to showing up daily and tackling the hardest tasks
  - Trying to calculate or predict outcomes instead of executing would have prevented him from solving the crisis
- Message to anyone currently going through a difficult time in their business:
  - Things do get better
  - One day you will look back and realize you successfully put out every fire in your business