

Taking Massive Risks

Channel: Onem · Published: Aug 28, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/N5WlaAeVxtU> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

On his 34th birthday, the creator reflects on how every meaningful outcome in his life — from his business trips to his relationship and team — stems directly from taking large, deliberate risks, and argues sustainable success is only reachable that way.

Contents

- 🎂 Birthday Reflection & the Universal Advice
- 💰 The Biggest Risks Taken This Year
- ❤️ Personal Risk: Relationship
- ⏮️ Looking Back: Turning 30 and Early Risks
- 🏆 Why Massive Risk Is the Only Path to Sustainable Success

Birthday Reflection & the Universal Advice 0:00

- Turning 34 prompts a sentimental look back — birthdays function as personal benchmarks
- Growing up, he noticed older men all gave the exact same advice:
 - "Take massive risk while you can"
- His initial skepticism: were they just copying each other? Did they actually know what they meant?
- Over time he came to understand the advice from lived experience — his current position is a direct result of the number of risks he has taken
 - "I've taken a ton of risks, and that's proud of that"

The Biggest Risks Taken This Year 0:46

- He describes this as the year he has taken the most risks of his life — "it's not even close"
- Specific financial risks itemised:
 - ~£20,000 per trip on some ONM (Onem) content trips — including Bali and Cambodia shoots
 - Hired a high-end camera operator at significant ongoing cost because "he's very good"
 - Built out a full gym and additional facilities at his current location — visible in the video
 - Hired a team he describes as "the best in the business" at a steep cost, who have been "exceptional"
- His approach: identifying a series of smaller ongoing projects and "pulling the trigger on all of them" rather than waiting

♥ Personal Risk: Relationship 1:35

- Describes his current partner as "the most beautiful woman in the world" and "the best woman I've ever met"
- Credits the relationship entirely to taking a personal risk — moving or travelling abroad and "rolling the dice"
- They are approaching one year together at the time of filming
- Notes how fast the time has passed as a reminder of how quickly life moves

◀ Looking Back: Turning 30 and Early Risks 1:59

- References a YouTube video he made when he turned 30, framed around "the start of the male advantage"
 - Viewers commented that the backdrop looked "biblical" and called it a milestone moment
- Now 4 years on from that video
- The position he was in at 30 was itself the product of earlier risks:
 - Supplements business
 - Crypto investments
 - Solana — specifically called out as a significant win ("Solana popping off")
- Pattern identified: each life stage has been built on the risks taken in the prior stage, with each round of risks larger than the last

🏆 Why Massive Risk Is the Only Path to Sustainable Success 2:43

- Distinguishes between two levels of success:
 - Small personal wins — "a little bit of success for yourself is cool"
 - Massive, sustainable success — the kind that funds family, raising children, protecting people, and covering large-scale expenses
- His argument: the second tier is only accessible through risk-taking; there is no route around it
- The motivation shifts as you get older — it stops being about personal lifestyle and becomes about legacy and responsibility

"You can only get there by taking risks."