

why I'm finally moving to NYC

Channel: SebastianG · Published: Aug 28, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=hrCvzIJlf64> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Sebastian announces he and his wife are moving from Scottsdale, Arizona to New York City for a minimum of one year, citing his wife's childhood dream, personal ambition, and the desire to surround himself with high-achieving SaaS founders and business contacts.

Contents

-  The Move: Who, What, and When
-  His Wife's Lifelong Dream
-  Sebastian's Personal Pull Toward City Life
-  The Business Case for NYC
-  Network and High-Achiever Proximity
-  The Historical Inspiration: Edison, J.P. Morgan, and NYC
-  Acknowledging the Downsides
-  Call to Action: Looking to Connect in NYC

The Move: Who, What, and When 0:00

- This is a joint move — Sebastian and his wife are both relocating
- Planned minimum duration: 1 year
- Currently living in northern Scottsdale, Arizona — literally in the mountains, described as very quiet
 - Notes he is probably the youngest person in his area by 20 years
 - Describes his current environment as not pushing or motivating him

His Wife's Lifelong Dream 0:24

- His wife has dreamed of living in New York City since she was a child
 - She grew up in Romania and was only four years old when she first saw NYC on TV
 - Describes the feeling she had as a "gravitational pull" — something told her, "One day, you will live there. You will have to live there."
- She wants to pursue fashion-related activities and experience city life
 - Goal includes having a cool apartment with a view

- Sebastian frames this explicitly as wanting to help make her dream a reality: "I want to participate in making that dream come true for her."

Sebastian's Personal Pull Toward City Life 1:13

- Has always wanted to live in a city and have an apartment with a city view
- Considers the New York skyline "a pretty awesome skyline"
- Sees living in one of the world's most iconic and historically rich cities as an experience that will "pay dividends" and create lasting memories
- Tired of Scottsdale — describes growing "sick of it" and wanting somewhere new
 - Notes it's also simply very hot
 - Doesn't want to relocate to a different part of Scottsdale — wants a full change
- Feels every time he visits New York, something tells him he needs to be there: "There's like an energy that pulls me there."
- Additional personal motivators:
 - NYC is closer to Europe, making travel easier
 - Wants to explore cities on the East Coast
 - Eventually wants to settle on the East Coast long-term, so this is a starting point
 - Has no kids yet, which gives him a rare window of flexibility: "I have this amazing opportunity sitting right in front of me and I don't want to not take advantage of it."

The Business Case for NYC 1:59

- Stresses the move must be economically viable — "it has to make sense business-wise"
- Has been running a software (SaaS) business for approximately 2 years
- Describes this as the right moment: "It's just time, man."
- Current Scottsdale environment isn't conducive to growth:
 - Not surrounded by high achievers in his area
 - Feels too comfortable — going to NYC specifically to "remove that comfort" and "up the ante" professionally

"I'm going there to put myself in a little bit of an uncomfortable position cuz I've been in a pretty comfortable position for the last few years."

- NYC offers constant proximity to relevant events, people, and opportunities in his industry

Network and High-Achiever Proximity 4:44

- Has half a dozen to a dozen friends in NYC who are around his age and have:
 - Sold software companies for anywhere from $30 million to $150 million

- Built software companies worth hundreds of millions
- Wants to spend time with these people — talk, hang out, learn how they think and operate
- Already has a substantial internet reputation and following, which means he gets invited to events and networking opportunities organically
 - Acknowledges he hasn't been taking advantage of this — moving to NYC is partly about finally doing so
- Describes the opportunity as "like an Uber right away" for accelerating his growth
- Wants to build a "very powerful network" in the city

The Historical Inspiration: Edison, J.P. Morgan, and NYC 5:51

- Was inspired by the TV show The Men Who Built America, recommended (indirectly) by Sam Ovens
 - Clarifies Ovens didn't personally recommend it to him — just mentioned it publicly
- The show covers the original American capitalists who shaped modern capitalism
- Key story that resonated: J.P. Morgan and Thomas Edison in New York City
 - Edison created the light bulb; J.P. Morgan funded him
 - Morgan asked Edison to light up his entire house
 - Morgan then hosted an exclusive gathering of wealthy, aristocratic friends for a live demonstration
 - House was completely dark, then lights came on all at once
 - Guests were stunned — reactions like "What is this witchcraft?"
 - Everyone immediately wanted lights installed in their own homes
 - Morgan and Edison then partnered to build power generators throughout New York City
 - NYC became the first city to come alive at night with electric light
- Sebastian finds it meaningful that this history took place in the exact location where he'll be living
- Reflects that there are "so many more stories" and so much history concentrated in that city — considers it a "great privilege" to live there

Acknowledging the Downsides 8:10

- Admits he romanticizes NYC somewhat
- Has visited before and knows the reality:
 - Can smell bad
 - Can be dirty
 - Can be loud
- Accepts these realities but says "there's still something there that's calling to me"
- Frames the commitment as low-risk: it's 1 year, and worst case he walks away with a memorable experience
 - "Worst case scenario, I'm sure I'll just have a memorable experience to look back on."

Call to Action: Looking to Connect in NYC 8:55

- Actively looking to meet people in New York City — invites viewers to reach out if they:
 - Are in the e-commerce / DTC (direct-to-consumer) space
 - Own or know someone who owns a DTC brand
 - Have a Shopify app
 - Work in SaaS or know anyone in the SaaS industry
 - Or simply want to become friends
- Where to connect: LinkedIn and Twitter
- Also mentions wanting to keep posting YouTube videos — hopes a cool apartment with a view will improve video quality
- Asks viewers to leave comments suggesting topics they want him to cover