Executive Summary

A brief comedic moment where one person lectures others about being present and off social media — immediately undercut by the observation that he only says this because he has a connection himself.

Contents

---

-  The Setup: No Wi-Fi Complaint
-  The "Be Present" Lecture
-  The Hypocrisy Called Out

The Setup: No Wi-Fi Complaint 0:00

---

- Someone is asked why they didn't get the Wi-Fi
  - They insist there is no Wi-Fi available
  - They are directed to get it from someone named Matt instead

The "Be Present" Lecture 0:00

---

- A person begins repeatedly telling the group to "be present"
  - Tells them to "live life" and enjoy the moment
  - Argues that people should not live on social media
  - Says: "Live in the moment and you need to enjoy this exciting moment"
  - Frames it as an important life lesson about appreciating real experiences over online ones

The Hypocrisy Called Out 0:00

---

- Someone immediately claps back: "He says that when he has connection"
  - The implication is that the person lecturing everyone about being present only does so because he personally has internet access
  - The joke lands as classic hypocrisy — preaching mindfulness while being the one connected

The entire punchline: it's easy to tell others to "live in the moment" when you're not the one missing out on Wi-Fi.
