Ranking Snacks for Fat Loss (Granola Got Cooked)

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Oct 23, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/BypgJua9BFQ Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter tier-ranks 7 common snacks for fat loss, emphasizing protein content and low sugar as the key criteria — hard-boiled eggs and plain Greek yogurt win; granola, rice cakes, and trail mix are dismissed.

📑 Contents

- 🐹 Granola — F Tier
- 🍘 Rice Cakes — F Tier
- 🥚 Hard-Boiled Eggs — S Tier
- 🍫 Protein Bars — C Tier
- 🥩 Beef Jerky — A Tier
- 🥛 Greek Yogurt — F Tier or S Tier
- 🍫 Dark Chocolate — B Tier
- 🥾 Trail Mix — D Tier

🐹 Granola — F Tier 0:00

- Rated F tier immediately and with no hesitation
  - Described as looking like "gerbil food" — "something you feed a hamster or a small critter"
  - Brandon frames himself as a "big mammal, top of the food chain" who has no interest in eating a bag of crumbs
  - Bottom line: dismissed as garbage with no redeeming fat-loss value mentioned

🍘 Rice Cakes — F Tier 0:10

- Also rated F tier
  - Primary knock: "empty calories" with no protein
  - Does not promote satiety — "it really doesn't get you full"
  - Implied takeaway: a snack with no protein and no fullness benefit is useless for fat loss

🥚 Hard-Boiled Eggs — S Tier 0:22

- Rated S tier — the highest possible ranking
  - 6 g of protein per egg

- Relatively cheap compared to other high-protein snacks
- Brandon personally eats 9–12 eggs per day
- Pre-empts cholesterol concern: "my cholesterol is perfect — I get blood work done"
- Practical, portable, and genuinely filling due to protein content

🍫 Protein Bars — C Tier 0:35

- Rated C tier — mediocre, not recommended but not the worst
  - Many are "just candy with some protein in" — marketing dresses up what is essentially a candy bar
  - Some have a "ridiculous amount of calories"
  - Implied advice: read labels carefully; most aren't worth it

🥩 Beef Jerky — A Tier 0:45

- Rated A tier
  - Brandon's go-to travel snack — takes roughly 50 flights a year and buys jerky from airport stores
  - High in protein, portable, and convenient
  - Key caveat: avoid varieties with high sugar content — "then it's just like candy meat"
  - Actionable tip: check the label and choose low-sugar jerky

🥛 Greek Yogurt — F Tier or S Tier 0:57

- Rating depends entirely on the variety chosen
  - Most commercial Greek yogurt = F tier — brands load it with sugar and fruit, negating fat-loss benefits
  - Plain, regular Greek yogurt = S tier — high protein, no added sugar, genuinely useful for fat loss
  - Clear actionable rule: always buy plain Greek yogurt; avoid flavored versions

🍫 Dark Chocolate — B Tier 1:06

- Rated B tier — a solid, moderate choice
  - Contains "tons of antioxidants"
  - The right brand keeps sugar content low
  - Not S tier, but a legitimate treat that fits into a fat-loss diet when chosen carefully

🥾 Trail Mix — D Tier 1:10

- Rated D tier — near the bottom
  - "Unless you are a small child on a field trip, you ain't got no reason to be eating trail mix"
  - Implied issues: calorie-dense, sugar from dried fruit and chocolate pieces, low protein relative to calories
  - Punchline: "You ain't on no trail" — no lifestyle justification for most people eating it