Do This for 90 Days and You'll Never Be Broke Again EP 340

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Oct 23, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TP6C49G-SD4 Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter, a 27-year sales veteran who has closed at 80% and trained 15,000+ online fitness entrepreneurs, delivers a full sales masterclass covering script framework, the Thing-Effect-Emotion method, skill acquisition stages, total immersion practice, and the mindset/life management systems that separate elite closers from average ones.

📑 Contents

- 🎙️ Intro, Sponsors & Context
- 💪 Phil Collins Curls: Fitness Tip
- 🏆 Why Sales Is the Best Career
- 🧠 The Two Pillars: Skills + Mindset
- 📜 The 6-Part Sales Script Framework
- 🎯 Thing-Effect-Emotion: The Core Method
- 🔄 Prospect Talks 80%, You Ask Questions
- 🧩 Roadblocks: Where You Spend Most Time
- 💊 Prescriptions: Selling Without Selling
- ❌ Objections: Why Elite Closers Rarely Face Them
- 🕐 Skill Acquisition Matrix: Hours to Mastery
- 🎧 Total Immersion: The Game-Changer
- 🧘 Mindset: Life Management for Closers
- 📋 The PDF System: Plan, Delegate, or F It
- 🧬 The Neuroscience of Why This Works
- 💼 How to Get Started with No Experience
- ❓ Q&A: Extrovert vs. Introvert & Pullbacks

🎙️ Intro, Sponsors & Context 0:45

- Episode 340 of the Victory Talk Podcast, hosted by Brandon Carter ("Big Brandon Carter, King Keto, Gymnasium Jesus")
- Co-host/moderator: Movia DJ Chaita Grande, monitoring the live chat

- Focus of the episode: sales — framed as the single most important skill for making money
  - "If you're not making sales, you ain't got a business, you got a hobby."
- Sponsor 1 — Live AI Training (Brandon himself):
  - Live training that Sunday at 7:00 PM Eastern on growing an online fitness business using AI
  - Claims to have put out 800 pieces of content in 30 days across Instagram, TikTok, YouTube, and Facebook — solo, no media team, using AI to edit all videos (Claude/ChatGPT)
  - Student testimonials shown:
    - Dejo: $3,000 in one week from a 21-day challenge with 104 participants
    - Another student: 38 monthly clients, $15,000 in his first month
    - Chris: $2,800 in one week, sitting at $19,000 for the month
    - Alejandra: $9,000 in her first 28 days
  - Promise: learn to make an extra $300–$500/day, even without certification, big following, or extensive experience
  - "Over the last... I've taught over 15,000 people how to grow successful online fitness businesses."
- Sponsor 2 — Hiring Setters:
  - Barclays laid off 5,000 people; Kroger also laying off — Brandon is hiring instead
  - Looking for setters: people who call inbound opted-in leads and book them onto sales calls with closers
  - Not cold calling — leads have already opted in
  - Setters can work remotely, on their own schedule; top setters make up to $10K/month on commission
  - Closers make more but require experience — setters is the entry point
  - All closers on his team come from either former students or promoted setters
  - Apply via link in description; HR team handles hiring, not Brandon directly
- Sponsor 3 — "Thot Repellent" (comedy bit): a fictional spray to repel undesirable women, funded by super chats

💪 Phil Collins Curls: Fitness Tip 0:45

- Brandon addresses comments accusing him of "flexing" — clarifies his arms are just developed
- Technique he calls "Phil Collins Curls" for arm development:
  - Do your regular workout, including arm work
  - At the end, set up cable curls with a rope on one cable machine and cable pushdowns on the other
  - The rope attachment provides a wrist twist that activates the bicep more fully
  - Alternate between cable curls and cable pushdowns with zero rest between sets
  - Reason for cables: you can drop weight quickly as fatigue sets in without breaking flow
  - Put on "In the Air Tonight" by Phil Collins — nearly 5 minutes long
  - Start your first rep the moment you hit play
  - Continue for the entire song — consecutive supersets, no rest
  - Lactic acid builds; you'll want to quit around the mid-point

- The famous drum break (~3:40 in) provides a psychological "second wind"
  - "I can feel it coming in the air tonight" → push through
  - "I've been waiting for this moment for all my life" → drum fill hits → renewed energy
- Brandon does this 5–6 days/week since he only does full-body workouts ending with arms
- Also uses noise-cancelling headphones to block gym music ("Maroon 5," "Taylor Swift")

🏆 Why Sales Is the Best Career 17:55

- Brandon's credentials: made millions in personal sales, ran sales teams doing multiple millions/year, 27 years of consecutive sales experience
  - "It'd be difficult to find another... There's not a lot of people walking around who've been doing sales for that long."
  - By the 10,000-hour expert standard, he's a "triple expert / triple OG"
- The three career options compared:

Career Path	Upside	Downside
Regular job	Low risk, low responsibility, set hours	Employer incentivized to pay you as little as labor law allows
Own business	High earning ceiling	80% failure rate; must manage marketing, sales, product, HR, customer service, reputation, risk
Sales	Commission-based pay, remote options, boss incentivized to pay you MORE	Requires skill and mindset discipline

- Business ownership realities:
  - 30 employees = "like having 30 children" — every personal crisis becomes your problem
  - Must be good at marketing, sales, product development, customer service, reputation management simultaneously
  - 80% of businesses fail — "You almost got to be insane to start a business"
- Sales as the "sweet spot":
  - Commission structure means earning is tied directly to output
  - Remote work and flexible hours common
  - Boss wants to pay you MORE because you bring revenue
  - Zero responsibility for the product, marketing spend, or post-sale issues ("Johnny Nissan is going to court")

🧠 The Two Pillars: Skills + Mindset 27:33

- Two non-negotiable requirements for becoming a top closer:

    - Skills (script, practice hours, total immersion, data tracking)
    - Mindset (life management, state control, prize frame)
- Mindset may be MORE important than skills:
    - "If I had to pick between two salespeople — one with all the skills, one with an elite mindset — I'm picking the one with the mindset 100% of the time."
    - Skillful salespeople with broken mindsets see their close rates collapse suddenly when life goes wrong
- Data tracking as a core skill:
    - Track bookings per week, no-show rate, and close rate — review daily
    - High no-show rate = closer needs to improve pre-call engagement
    - Top closers in his organization close at 70–80% of calls taken (not total bookings, which always have some no-shows)
    - "When I was closing, I was closing at 80%."

📜 The 6-Part Sales Script Framework 34:02

- Jordan Belfort reference: built a billion-dollar hedge fund using a script read by people pulled off the street at Long Island diners
    - Brandon paid Belfort $20,000 for a weekend to refine his own scripts
    - "If Jordan Belfort needed a script, what makes you think you can freestyle it?"
- Script must be internalized, not robotically read:
    - Read/practice it 100 times minimum so it becomes internal — "It needs to be in you, not on you"
    - Goal: glance at it for location reference, then speak naturally
    - If a prospect throws you off, handle the detour and return to the script — only possible with mastery
    - Analogy: salsa dancing — you can spin away from the two-step and come back whenever you want, but you must own the two-step
- The 6 sections of the framework (in order):
    - Vision
    - Pain
    - Roadblocks
    - Recap
    - Prescriptions
    - Offer (+ Objection Handling if needed)

🎯 Thing-Effect-Emotion: The Core Method 40:22

- Section 1: Vision — start here, NOT with pain
    - Ask: "If we were having this conversation a year from now, what would have had to happen for you to feel really happy with the results?"

    - Do NOT lead them — use their exact words; write them down verbatim
    - If vague ("I want to lose weight"), probe for specifics ("How much weight?") — you need a measurable target
    - NLP principle: mirror their exact language back throughout the call to build rapport
    - Then apply Thing → Effect → Emotion:
        - Thing: what they want ("lose 10 pounds")
        - Effect: what that will do for their life ("set a good example for my kids")
        - Emotion: how that will make them feel ("proud and confident")
    - Worst salespeople sell diet and exercise (the mechanism) — nobody buys that
    - Better salespeople sell the Thing
    - Best salespeople sell the Emotion — use the Thing as a vehicle to get there
    - Drill example: man wants a drill → really wants his wife to stop complaining → really wants a happy home
        - Smart salesperson sells the happy home, upsells the more expensive drill
    - Fitness example: man wants to lose 10 pounds → effect: set example for kids → emotion: proud and confident
    - Get as many Thing-Effect-Emotion combinations as possible per prospect
- Why start with Vision before Pain:
    - Contrast makes the pain feel worse
    - Analogy: dreaming about being with a deceased loved one, then waking up — regular life feels worse by contrast even if your life is objectively good
    - Paint the ideal vision first → then snatch them out of it → pain hits harder
- State change requirement:
    - Do NOT leave the Vision section until you see/hear a visible and audible state change — prospect must be noticeably happier and hopeful
    - Mirror neurons: your emotional state infects theirs — smile, be energetic, ask questions that make them feel the positive emotion
    - You are "head of state" on the call — you control the emotional weather, not the prospect
    - "You should be able to make this person cry on command. The best salespeople can do it."
    - Whatever someone thinks about, they will feel — whether it's real or not (demonstrated live with a dog dying scenario)
    - Example: a doctor entering the room with a grim demeanor before saying a word induces fear — use your mannerisms the same way

🔄 Prospect Talks 80%, You Ask Questions 60:12

- Prospect should be talking at least 80% of the time
    - Takes pressure off you — you only need to ask calibrated questions

    - If they're talking, they're engaged; if you're rambling, they zone out
- Ask questions only — the entire call should be question-driven
- Never be suggestive or assumptive: never say "that's what you want, right?" — always pull back slightly so they pull forward
    - "I don't know, man. Does that sound like it might be what you're looking for?"
- "Where do you want to go from here?" — Brandon's favorite transition question after the recap
    - Forces prospect to ask YOU to present a solution — they pull you forward
    - If they say "I don't know": "Would it be helpful if I showed you how I help my clients solve problems like the ones you have?" (note: not promising to help them, just showing how you've helped others)
- Core mindset shift: "I am not trying to sell him anything. My goal is to get him to ask me how he can purchase.""
    - Pushiness = pushback; not pushing = no resistance
    - "Always Be Closing" (1980s style) is less effective than getting them to pull you

🧩 Roadblocks: Where You Spend Most Time 63:20

- Section 3: Roadblocks — what has held them back from achieving their goal
    - Ask: "In your opinion, what's been the main thing holding you back from finally losing that weight?"
    - Apply Thing-Effect-Emotion to each roadblock too
    - Common fitness roadblocks: diet inconsistency, not knowing what to eat, lack of accountability, confusion
- Spend the bulk of call time here — more than any other section
    - "If I only had 10 minutes to make a sale, I'd spend 7–8 of those minutes on roadblocks."
    - Get as many roadblocks as possible — rarely just one
    - Get Thing-Effect-Emotion from every single roadblock
- Ways to draw out emotions without dangling the same word repeatedly:
    - "What's been the worst part about that?"
    - "How has that affected your life?"
    - "How frustrating has that been?"
    - "What's that been like for you?"
    - "Has that been difficult for you?"
    - "How'd you get to the point where you knew you had to do something?"
    - Mix up phrasing — humans don't repeat the same question, so don't sound robotic
- These are "the combinations to the safe" — the prospect hands you exactly what you need to unlock the sale
- Section 2: Pain flows naturally after Vision:
    - After state change in Vision, say: "So that's the goal — but tell me what's going on right now."
    - The contrast from the positive vision makes current pain feel sharper

- Probe: "How long has this been going on?" Apply Thing-Effect-Emotion to current pain too

💊 Prescriptions: Selling Without Selling 75:04

- Section 4: Recap — after Vision, Pain, and Roadblocks:
  - "Do you mind if I summarize everything you told me to make sure I have a really good understanding of your situation?"
  - They always say yes; use their exact words as you recap
  - Include: their goals, the effects, the emotions, their current pain, the emotional weight of it, and each roadblock
  - End with: "Where do you want to go from here?" → they ask you to present a solution
- Section 5: Prescriptions — for each roadblock, present the exact opposite Thing-Effect-Emotion:
  - "I remember you saying your biggest problem was consistency... so what I do for my clients is..."
  - Prescription example for consistency roadblock:
    - Personalized meal plan in a custom app based on their food preferences
    - Client logs food in MyFitnessPal → syncs to the app → Brandon sees macros daily
    - Daily check-in whether they hit macros or not — prevents two-day slips
    - Result: clients find consistency easy for the first time; progress accelerates; confidence grows
  - After each prescription: "I don't know, brother. Does that sound like it might be what you're looking for?" (said skeptically/neutrally — never eagerly)
  - Follow-up questions to get them to sell themselves:
    - "What makes you say that?"
    - "What part of this do you think would be the most beneficial for you?"
    - "How do you think that would help you?"
  - Vary the question phrasing each roadblock so it doesn't feel scripted
  - "I want him to tell me why he should buy this. If I tell him, he can argue with me. He can't argue with himself. That's called schizophrenia.""
- Never say you'll help them — only show how you've helped people like them
  - "He ain't give me no money yet. I'm not helping him with anything."
- Prize frame throughout prescriptions:
  - Never eager, never assumptive, always slightly pulling back so they lean forward
  - "I don't know, man. That's how I help my clients. Does that sound like it might help you?"

❌ Objections: Why Elite Closers Rarely Face Them 86:08

- If you execute the above correctly, you should rarely get objections
  - "There was a point where I got so good at this that I almost never got objections."
  - Closers at 70–80% close rate are not routinely handling objections

- Only 3 types of objections exist:
  - Financial: "I don't have the money" / "It's too expensive"
  - Third party: "I need to talk to my wife/husband/the Lord"
  - Stall: "I'll do it later" / "Not right now"
- Brandon's thesis: every objection is a money objection
  - Third party: "If you had enough money, you wouldn't need her permission. LeBron James doesn't ask Savannah about $10K."
  - Stall: "If it wasn't a lot of money, you'd put it down now and just start later."
- Every life problem is also a money problem:
  - Magic Johnson: would have died of HIV in the 80s/90s like everyone else — survived and thrived because wealth gave him access to superior treatment
- If the prospect genuinely has no money, move on — you can't put money in their account
- Spend little time on objection handling in training — if your process is right, you won't need it much

🕐 Skill Acquisition Matrix: Hours to Mastery 86:17

- Reference: Malcolm Gladwell's Outliers (10,000-hour rule), also The Talent Code and Talent Is Overrated
- Brandon's scale (approximate):

Hours of Practice	Level
100 hours	"Not bad" — people won't mock you; minimum to not get fired
1,000 hours	Genuinely good — can put up real numbers
2,000 hours	Really good — people start to be amazed
5,000 hours	Results seem unreal — people doubt it's possible
10,000 hours	One of the best in the world
20,000 hours	One of the best ever

- Time to reach 100 hours by daily practice:
  - 1 hr/day ≈ 3 months
  - 2 hrs/day ≈ 1.5 months
  - 3 hrs/day ≈ 1 month
  - 4 hrs/day ≈ 25 days
- Time to reach 1,000 hours:
  - 1 hr/day ≈ 2.5+ years
  - 2 hrs/day ≈ just over 1 year
  - 3 hrs/day ≈ about 1 year
  - 4 hrs/day ≈ 6 months

- Warning: buying a sales course ≠ being ready to close at a high-performing organization
  - "You're going to get embarrassed by my sales team. It's fiscally irresponsible for me to keep you on payroll at a 20–30% close rate next to people doing 70–80%."

🎧 Total Immersion: The Game-Changer 1:40:31

- The single biggest separator between closers at 70–80% vs. 20–30%
- Brandon developed this under pressure to pay a tax bill quickly — booked 10 hours of sales calls/day and did total immersion when not on calls
  - "Week two, it felt like it was too easy. I really can't explain it."
- People have stopped him on the street (e.g., Design District) showing $100K/month deposits crediting total immersion
- How it works:
  - Buy two pairs of noise-cancelling headphones (at least one pair waterproof)
  - One pair charges while you wear the other — you are ALWAYS covered
  - Listen to sales training 24 hours a day except:
    - When talking to another person (wife, kids, friends, sales calls)
    - When sleeping
  - Every other moment: in the shower, getting dressed, commute, gym, eating alone, CVS run — always listening
  - After ~2 weeks, the game begins to slow down:
    - "It's like Neo in the Matrix with the bullets — you can see what's going to happen next."
    - You can anticipate objections, emotional shifts, and buying signals before they happen
- Requires an active sales role to be fully effective — you need real calls to pair with the listening

🧘 Mindset: Life Management for Closers 1:44:48

- Mindset is arguably MORE important than skills
  - A salesperson crushing it can see their close rate collapse suddenly — always traced back to something in their personal life
- Brandon tracks his salespeople's entire lives to maintain performance:
  - Hours of sleep
  - Daily mood (rated numerically)
  - Whether they meditated
  - Macros hit
  - Supplements taken
  - Workout completed
  - "Anybody who's ever trained salespeople will tell you: you have to take control of their entire life."

- Meditation is especially critical for closers — state control requires emotional regulation, and meditation is the primary tool
- Burnout is a myth in the traditional sense:
  - Burnout doesn't come from activity or working too much
  - Kids play all day and never burn out — they're not stressed
  - Burnout comes from stress, specifically from two sources:
    - Conflicts: relationship issues, family drama, kids acting out, couple arguments — 80% of the time a closer's rate drops, it's because of a woman
    - Projects: moving, buying a car, planning a vacation — moving is one of the most stressful human activities; every time a salesperson moves, close rate drops
  - Brain = CPU analogy: too many tabs open → computer slows down → eventually crashes → people get sick
    - "I have not had a cold in 11 years. I keep conflicts and projects as low as possible."
- Real example: salesperson's close rate dropped → traced to neglecting wife (love language: quality time) → Brandon had him schedule a date night on the call before hanging up → close rate recovered
  - "I had to fix this man's marriage so I could make more money."
- Sales manager's job: take ownership of every aspect of each salesperson's life — not just their call metrics

📋 The PDF System: Plan, Delegate, or F It 1:53:17

- A stress-reduction framework for closers (and anyone)
- Step 1: Make a list of every conflict and project in your life right now
- Step 2: For each item, assign one of three labels:
  - P — Plan: schedule time in your calendar to create a plan for it (not to execute it, just to plan it)
  - D — Delegate: hand it off to someone else (hire movers, use AI agents, have someone else plan the vacation)
  - F — F it: consciously decide it's not worth your mental bandwidth and drop it
- Step 3: For every P item, put a specific calendar block for when you'll make the plan
- Result: stress level drops dramatically simply because items are out of your head and accounted for
  - "Rate your stress from 1–10 before doing this exercise. Do it, then rate again. I promise it drops dramatically."
- Less stress → better emotional state → better state control on calls → more money
- "Your ability as a salesperson to control the prospect's emotion will dictate how much money you make."

🧬 The Neuroscience of Why This Works 1:59:18

- Three parts of the brain relevant to sales:

    - Neocortex (newest, largest in humans): logic, language, mathematics — where humans differ from animals
    - Limbic system (emotional brain): where all decisions are actually made
    - Brain stem / autonomic functions: breathing, heartbeat — automatic
- Key insight: 100% of decisions are emotional; logic is used to justify them after the fact
    - "Even red pill guys say women think emotionally. No — ALL humans make decisions emotionally and back them up logically."
    - People in prison made decisions during a particular emotional state they wouldn't make otherwise
    - Sexual decisions made in a highly aroused state that wouldn't be made otherwise (comic example about viewers' origins)

    > "All 100% of your decisions are based off the emotions you felt at the time you made the decision."

- This is why Thing-Effect-Emotion works:
    - Selling diet and exercise = selling to the neocortex (logic) — it doesn't buy
    - Selling the Thing = one level deeper
    - Selling the Emotion = hitting the limbic system — this is where the buying decision lives
    - The neocortex then backs up the emotional decision with logic (the Thing and Effect)
- Why you must believe in your product:
    - If you know your product is bad, even subconsciously that's an emotion — it will bleed into your performance
    - Good salespeople need a genuinely good product to go all out without internal resistance

💼 How to Get Started with No Experience 1:38:17

- Entry point: become a setter
    - Call inbound opted-in leads, book them onto sales calls with closers
    - Not the full sales script — but builds skills in talking to strangers, controlling state, being charismatic on the phone
    - Commission paid on closes generated from your bookings; top setters earn $5K–$10K/month
    - Brandon is actively hiring setters — apply via link in description
    - HR reviews applications; if fit, sets up interview; if hired, training provided
    - Having some prior experience increases likelihood of being hired
- Path to closer:
    - Perform as a setter → get promoted, or
    - Be a former student of the program who wants to close
    - No outside "I just bought a closing course" applications accepted for closer roles

- For online fitness business owners: the same sales framework applies to signing clients; the live AI training covers this specifically

❓ Q&A: Extrovert vs. Introvert & Pullbacks 1:56:04

- Q (Raul): Is it better to be an extrovert or introvert for sales?
  - Doesn't matter — what matters is emotional control
  - Extroverts get more social media attention in sales content, but calm/introverted closers can be just as deadly
  - Calm, quiet salespeople often maintain the prize frame more easily — they naturally don't come across as needy or pushy
  - Very enthusiastic salespeople can inadvertently appear needy and undercut the prize frame
  - Ideal demeanor: laid-back, comfortable, not pushy
- Q (Raul follow-up): Do you ever use pullbacks in the process?
  - Rarely needed if the script is executed correctly
  - Occasionally used in objection handling phase — "it's in the utility belt" but not a go-to weapon
  - Objections are rare enough that pullbacks are an infrequent tool, not a core technique