5 Edits, 5 Prompts, Zero Editing Apps

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Nov 06, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/uFV_EM0OLVY Source: description only

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter shows how five visually distinct social media edits were produced using only single-sentence prompts typed into Claude — no video editing software opened at any point.

📑 Contents

- 🎯 Core Concept: One Prompt, One Edit
- 📝 The Five Edits Showcased

🎯 Core Concept: One Prompt, One Edit

- The entire premise is that no editing app was opened at any stage
  - Every result came purely from typing one command into Claude
  - Implies Claude generated the code, assets, or instructions needed to produce each visual effect directly
- Positioned as a workflow revelation for content creators who want to skip traditional editing tools

📝 The Five Edits Showcased

- Each edit was produced with a single prompt; five distinct effect types are demonstrated:
  - Tier list — a ranked visual layout (common in social/gaming content)
  - Notification that explodes — an animated notification graphic with an explosive reveal effect
  - Three-stack montage — a split or layered arrangement of three video/image panels
  - Liquid glass graph — a data visualization styled with a translucent, liquid-glass aesthetic
  - Own reels orbiting around him — a composited effect where his own short-form videos circle around his on-screen presence
- No additional detail on the exact prompt wording or technical output format is provided in the source