I'm 44 And Every Hour Of My Day Is Planned

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Nov 07, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/AP-scJI9fKY Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter claims that hourly calendar planning is the single habit that lets him out-produce most people while also spending more quality time with family and never sacrificing health, fun, or sleep.

📑 Contents

- 🗓️ The Core Habit: Planning Every Hour
- 👨‍👩‍👧 Family & Fun Are Scheduled, Not Sacrificed
- ⏰ The "No Time" Excuse Debunked

🗓️ The Core Habit: Planning Every Hour 0:00

- Every single hour of every day is accounted for in his calendar
  - This is presented as the foundational reason he out-executes most people
  - The payoff is higher output across daily, weekly, and monthly timeframes

👨‍👩‍👧 Family & Fun Are Scheduled, Not Sacrificed 0:00

- He explicitly schedules fun and family time the same way he schedules work
  - Flew to Georgia specifically to spend a full week with his son
  - Activities on that trip included:
    - Taking his son and his son's friends trick-or-treating
    - Chaperoning a school field trip to the zoo
- His argument: calendar planning does not force trade-offs
  - You can hit all your goals at a high level AND keep family time intact
  - You do not have to sacrifice health, sleep, or enjoyment

⏰ The "No Time" Excuse Debunked 0:23

- He hears people say "I just don't have time" frequently and rejects the premise entirely

> "You got enough time. You're just not using your [calendar]." — Brandon Carter

- His diagnosis: people are not living out of their calendar

    - Not planning every hour means hours disappear without intention
    - The time exists; the system to use it does not
- Implied takeaway: the fix is simple — open your calendar and assign every hour a purpose