

Don't Quit

Channel: Tim Luong · Published: Sep 08, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/UJKhbmfhVhg> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Business requires both logical planning and emotional resilience. Since mistakes are inevitable, the most important factor is simply staying in the game — you only lose when you stop playing.

Contents

-  Logic Has Limits in Business
-  Resilience Is the Real Edge

Logic Has Limits in Business 0:00

- Business is described as "very complex"
 - You can be as logical, prepared, and planned as you want
 - But logic alone is not enough — there is another side to balance it

Resilience Is the Real Edge 0:00

- The non-logical side of business is just as critical as the strategic side
 - Mistakes in business are not a possibility — they are a certainty: "you will mess up"
 - The key question becomes: how long can you keep going and playing the game after those mistakes?

"As long as you stay in the game, you don't lose."

- Staying in the game is framed as the singular condition for not losing
 - Quitting — not failure — is what ends the game