🎯 The $1 Million Liquidity Threshold 0:00

- Core claim: until you have $1 million in liquid cash, you are not truly playing the business game — you are merely surviving
  - Liquidity provides the stability and strategic freedom needed to actually grow, rather than react to month-to-month swings

📉 Early Volatility and Humble Living 0:00

- When earning under $100,000/month, Tim described his situation as extremely volatile
  - Monthly income swung dramatically: $30K one month, $80K the next, then back down to $20K
  - He was living in his parents' house
  - He was driving a small white truck
  - Lifestyle was kept deliberately minimal to preserve cash

💡 The Mentor's Advice 0:22

- A mentor who was doing eight figures annually in his business gave Tim a single directive:
  - "You need to get to a million dollars in liquidity as fast as possible"
- Tim made this his primary goal, organizing all decisions around it:
  - Continued living with his parents
  - Ate at McDonald's and Chipotle to minimize expenses
  - Kept driving the white truck — no lifestyle upgrades

- Focused exclusively on growing the business, making it more stable, and accumulating cash

🏦 Reaching the Goal and What Followed 0:43

- By age 24, Tim had $1 million in liquid cash sitting in his bank account
- Shortly after hitting that milestone, his business began to 2x and 3x
  - Implied that the liquidity buffer enabled bolder moves and removed survival-mode constraints
- Takeaway for entrepreneurs: focus on reaching $1 million liquid in your bank account as fast as possible — treat it as the single most important early milestone
