Executive Summary

Tim Luong built a portfolio of online businesses generating over eight figures annually. He credits the transformation to recognizing and dismantling four invisible limiting beliefs around money, persistence, focus, loyalty, and frugality — beliefs that once made him successful but later kept him stuck.

Limiting Belief 1: Never Quit — The Sunk-Cost Trap 0:22

- The core paradox: the hardest thing to leave is not what's failing — it's what's still working
 - Not quitting can make you successful, but it can also keep you trapped for years in the wrong vehicle
- Tim's personal story:
 - Started as a day trader in college, earning roughly six figures annually
 - Wanted passive income, so studied what wealthy people do → they build companies
 - First business failed; the second worked and scaled to $300K/month by age 24–25
 - Eventually grew that business to over $1 million/month
 - But hit a hard ceiling because the model — online education / community membership — was excellent for cash flow and personal branding, but structurally poor for building a sellable asset (e.g., a $100M+ exit)
 - The fatal flaw: no recurring revenue, which is the engine required for real scalable, sellable business value
 - Despite recognizing the ceiling, he kept pushing for three additional years because of his deeply ingrained
