

Bali Best Moments

Channel: Onem · Published: Aug 06, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ysTr_zlLF2g Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

A candid, high-energy group trip vlog from Onem's Bali stay, showcasing a luxury house tour, group banter, water sports, and spontaneous discussions about mindset, ROI thinking, fitness, and money.

Contents

-  House Tour & First Impressions
-  Reunions & Group Energy
-  Mindset Talk: Everything Happens For Me
-  Group Games & Banter
-  Life Philosophy: Get in Shape and Get Money
-  Water Sports & Adrenaline Activities

House Tour & First Impressions 0:00

- The group is welcomed into a large Bali property described as a "humble abode"
 - Features noted during the tour: two sofas, a small desk, a change room, a bath, a little shower, two sinks, and a bedroom
 - A football is also spotted, prompting surprise and excitement from the group
- The host explains they had a previous house on this trip but felt it wasn't up to "Onem standards"
 - Decision was made to upgrade and move the group to a new, better property
 - The new house is described as "arguably the best house that we've ever stayed in"
 - Host expresses desire to return: "I think we do a month here every single year"
- Reaction upon seeing the house is overwhelmingly positive
 - Cheering, laughter, and expressions like "This is the best feeling ever. Just looking at the house"
- Notably, the previous house apparently lacked glasses for drinks — the new one has them, which is called out as an improvement: "they got it in glasses this time, unlike the last one"

Reunions & Group Energy 1:58

- Group members reunite, with genuine warmth and excitement
 - One member is from Guam but lives in the US — a mix-up occurs where someone assumes he lives in Australia, leading to laughs

- Quote: "I missed you, dog. I f miss you. So good to see you."
- A late arrival named Jesse joins the trip after seeing the videos online
 - Jesse says: "I had to come. I saw the videos."
 - His arrival is met with excitement from the group
- There is ongoing banter about a "Bali number one" event ranking system
 - Group debates what counts as event number one, two, and three
 - Someone jokes about who the "superstar" of the trip is
- Teasing about one member being sleepy after a long flight
 - Reference to previous trip behavior ("kissing girls") — light-hearted ribbing about what he got up to last time versus this time
- A humorous moment where someone does an impression of another group member in the kitchen, recounting a specific memory involving someone named Alvaro returning from camp
 - The impression is debated — "I've done it to you in the kitchen many a time. You don't remember?"
- Northern Lights moment: someone excitedly calls the group outside to see northern lights, causing chaos and laughter

Mindset Talk: Everything Happens For Me 4:16

- One group member shares a core personal philosophy during a candid conversation
 - Core belief: "Everything happens for me" — not to him, but for him
 - He acknowledges others find it unusual when he talks this way
- Key points of the philosophy:
 - There is no such thing as a bad thing in his life
 - He does not label negative experiences as negative
 - Reasoning: negative experiences allow him to experience certain things that project him forward in life
 - This realization may come immediately or up to 10 years later — the timing doesn't matter, the growth is what counts
- The framing is one of radical personal responsibility and optimism — viewing all events as opportunities rather than setbacks

Group Games & Banter 5:25

- The group organizes a game or challenge, splitting into teams
 - Teams are humorously described as "Melanin versus Wife" (a play on melanin vs. white)
 - Head count: roughly three vs. four people per side
- A drinking or physical challenge is involved — there are instructions about technique: "you need to hit it back on the back of the throat"

- Some members don't drink, which is noted and accepted without pressure
- Banter about someone being a "problem solver" and how "complaining gets you places"
 - Context: the group managed to get two houses in one week, seemingly through persistent complaints or requests — "How we got two houses in one week?"
- Religious humor surfaces briefly
 - Someone asks how many girls another person has been with, prompting the response: "That's sexual immorality, bro. Like, just download the Bible app and lock into it."
- A Chris impression segment: group asks Chris to do an impression; he claims he's never done it before, but others insist he has

Life Philosophy: Get in Shape and Get Money 10:11

- A broader conversation breaks out about what young men today are focused on
 - One member notes guys as young as 14 are asking: "How do I get a house? Should I start a business?"
 - His take: at 14, that's too much pressure — "Just make sure your mom didn't catch you masturbating. That's your life setup at this point. Get some FIFA points."
- The group then pivots to genuinely analyzing why young men today are so focused on fitness and money
 - Theory: they've figured out ROI (Return on Investment) — they've evaluated all possible self-improvement paths and concluded that getting in shape and making money has the highest ROI
 - Quote: "I can do all these things, but if I just get in shape and get money, it's the highest ROI."
- The logic chain laid out step by step:
 - Get in shape → your body looks good in any clothes, so fashion sorts itself out
 - Get money → you can experiment with fashion, hire a designer
 - Therefore, fitness + money covers appearance almost entirely
 - The remaining gaps: emotional intelligence, understanding people, self-awareness — these are not solved by money/fitness alone
- Conclusion reached by the group:
 - Getting in shape and getting money "solves about 90% of the world's problems"
 - It gets you "60–70% of the way" to what you want with women specifically
 - The rest requires emotional depth and interpersonal skills

"Get in shape and get money. It solves about 90% of the world's problems."

Water Sports & Adrenaline Activities 12:08

- The group participates in an outdoor water or motor activity — context suggests jet skis or similar high-speed water sport

- Wires are tied together on equipment; someone asks "If it gets wet, is it a problem?" — the response implies mild concern but they proceed anyway
- Screaming, cheering, and "go go go" energy throughout
- Speed competition among the group:
 - One member claims to have reached 51 speed units (likely km/h)
 - Another (Alex) reached 54
 - Bragging rights and comparisons are exchanged
 - Someone admits they were "doing donuts" rather than going fast
- Donuts and maneuvers on the water are discussed — one member says he was doing circular moves and compares the sensation to a power feeling
 - A joking reference to "in Africa when they get like..." trails off into laughter
- Activity ends with someone on the verge of passing out from exertion
 - Countdown to rest: "3 2 1. Relax. Relax. Oh my god."
 - Group shouts: "GET REST. GET REST. OKAY."
- Overall the activity is described as "action packed" with genuine adrenaline — "like that adrenaline, I got up speed"