

Personal Training Is the Biggest Scam in Fitness

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Oct 06, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QjrlpD1TsEI> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

A 27-year personal training veteran argues in-person training scams clients by charging ~$300/week for the least important fitness factor (exercise) while ignoring diet. Online coaching with daily accountability tracking produces superior results at lower cost and far higher trainer income.

Contents

- 🏆 The Three Pillars of Fitness — and Why Training Is the Least Important
- 💰 How In-Person Training Scams the Client
- 😞 How In-Person Training Scams the Trainer
- 📖 Brandon's Personal Breaking Point: Family Tragedy and the 2008 Collapse
- 💡 Inventing Online Training in 2009–2010
- 📊 The Google Sheet + MyFitnessPal System
- 🔗 Why Online Trainers Are Incentivized Differently
- 🤖 How AI Has Changed the Game
- 🧠 The Accountability Principle
- 🏆 Student Success Stories
- ✅ Advice for Clients: What to Ask an Online Trainer
- 🗣️ The Coaching Philosophy — Why Everyone Needs a Coach
- 📢 Call to Action: Free Live Training

The Three Pillars of Fitness — and Why Training Is the Least Important 0:44

- The three non-negotiables for getting in shape:
 - Diet
 - Sleep
 - Training
- Diet is the most important factor; training is the least important
 - Brandon claims he has helped people lose significant weight with zero workouts — diet alone was the lever
- Key principle stated twice for emphasis: >