Executive Summary

Daily weigh-ins are unreliable and mentally damaging. Instead, weigh once a week to spot real trends, and focus every day on hitting the right calories and macros for your specific goal.

Why Daily Weigh-Ins Are Counterproductive 0:00

- Brandon actively discourages his clients from using the scale every day
 - Reason: daily fluctuations "mess with your mind"
 - Multiple factors unrelated to fat loss can shift the number on the scale:
 - Water retention
 - How much you urinated that day
 - How much you defecated that day
- Recommendation: weigh yourself once a week and look at the trends over time
 - Day-to-day swings obscure the real direction of progress
 - Weekly weigh-ins smooth out noise and show meaningful movement

What You Should Track Daily Instead 0:22

- The metric worth checking every single day is calorie and macro intake
 - Consistency in hitting daily targets is what actually drives body composition change
 - You need to know the specific calorie and macro numbers required for your individual goal — not just generic guidelines

The Ripped Road Map Tool 0:22

- Brandon offers a free tool called the Ripped Road Map to calculate personalized targets

- Inputs required:
 - Your current weight
 - Your height
 - Your goal
 - A photo of yourself
- The AI analyzes the photo and returns:
 - Your estimated body fat percentage
 - How much total body fat you are currently carrying
 - The exact daily calories and macros you need to hit your goal
- Cost: 100% free
- How to get it: comment the word "road map" on the video and Brandon sends it directly to you
