

You're all making money to make more money

Channel: Onem · Published: Aug 22, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/StZoL1vvUmU> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Most men chase money endlessly without knowing how to enjoy it. The speaker, addressing his community from a scenic setting, urges men to stop and actually live life before it's too late.

Contents

-  The Dog-Chasing-a-Squirrel Problem
-  Live in the Moment

The Dog-Chasing-a-Squirrel Problem 0:00

- Many men in the modern era are like "dogs chasing a squirrel"
 - They chase money/success thinking they want it
 - Once they actually achieve it, they don't know what to do with it
 - They "lie down and play around" until the next goal (the squirrel) appears and they chase again
- The core issue: men don't know what to do with the money or the lifestyle once they have it
 - Accumulation becomes the only purpose — making money just to make more money

Live in the Moment 0:23

- The speaker addresses his community ("all them members") directly, pointing to their surroundings as proof of enjoying the fruits of success
 - Beautiful view, glass of wine, friend (Ted) in the background
- Core message: "You got to live at some point, boys. You got to enjoy."

"You're going to die one day. Don't forget about that."

- Mortality is framed as the ultimate reason to stop deferring enjoyment and actually experience life