

[WARNING] Only 180 Days Left in 2026

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Jul 04, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KtJcHucBFb4> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

With roughly 180 days left in 2026, Brandon Carter challenges viewers who've stalled on their goals to stop lowering expectations and instead commit to maximum daily effort — every single day — until they win.

Contents

- 🏈 The Wake-Up Call: Halfway Through the Year
- 🏆 The Tom Brady 28-3 Comeback Story
- 🚩 The Three Bad Options (and One Good One)
- 📖 The Science of Getting Rich: Do All That Can Be Done Each Day
- 💪 What "Working at Capacity" Actually Means
- 🎯 The Prescription: Max Effort, Every Day, Until You Win
- 📞 Online Coaching Offer

🏈 The Wake-Up Call: Halfway Through the Year 0:00

- It is approximately the halfway point of 2026 — about 180 days remain
- Most people set goals at the start of the year and are nowhere near achieving them
 - Brandon's blunt assessment: "Most of y'all gave up before Valentine's Day on your 2026 goals"
 - Even those who kept working are not where they need to be

🏆 The Tom Brady 28-3 Comeback Story 25:00

- Brandon sets up the story: he was in Los Angeles watching the Super Bowl with friends
 - At halftime, the New England Patriots were down 28-3 to the Atlanta Falcons
 - He was a Bears fan at the time and not rooting for the Patriots
- Everyone in the room was ready to leave at halftime — the game seemed completely over
 - Brandon was "right about to say 'Yeah, let's get out of here'" when something stopped him
- The turning point: the camera zoomed in on Tom Brady's face right before the halftime break
 - Brandon saw a look in Brady's eyes that signaled he had not given up — he genuinely believed he could win
 - "This [guy] really thinks he can win" — Brandon convinced the group to stay

- What followed was, in Brandon's words, "the most epic comeback I'd ever seen — not only in a Super Bowl, but in any athletic performance. I've never seen nothing like that before, and I've never seen anything like that since."
- The lesson: being way down at halftime does not mean the game is over

The Three Bad Options (and One Good One) 142:00

- Brandon frames the current moment for viewers as a choice between four responses to being behind on goals:

Option	Description	Brandon's Verdict
1. Wave the white flag	Reset or abandon the goal entirely	Loser move
2. Cope	Tell yourself you didn't really want it anyway ("Money's not everything")	Self-deception
3. Become a hater	Tear down people who are succeeding	Cynical and wasteful
4. Have that look in your eye	Believe you can still win and double down on effort	The right choice

- On the "money's not everything" cope:
 - Brandon acknowledges the literal truth — "Nothing is everything. Oxygen is the most important thing in the world because without it you can only live for a few minutes."
 - But the real purpose of that phrase is to minimize the importance of financial success and rationalize inaction
- The most common temptation right now: lowering the goal to something more achievable
 - "A lot of you are tempted to do that right now. Maybe you already have."
 - Brandon urges viewers to resist this entirely

The Science of Getting Rich: Do All That Can Be Done Each Day 308:00

- Brandon's recommended book: The Science of Getting Rich by Wallace D. Wattles
 - Written over 100 years ago
 - Allegedly the book that inspired Rhonda Byrne to write The Secret — though Brandon notes she "left one part out"
- The core principle Wattles repeats no fewer than 50 times, in all caps and bold:

"Do all that can be done each day."

- Wattles' claim: "If you do all that can be done each day, it's almost difficult to fail."

- Brandon's personal observation: "You've never met anyone who did all they can do each day and still fail"
 - Caveat: this applies to non-zero-sum games — there can only be one NBA champion or one World Cup winner, so those are exceptions
 - But most personal goals (e.g., making $10K/month, losing body fat) are not zero-sum — there's no reason you can't win
- The deeper reason most people have never seen this fail: "Most of you have never met anyone who ever did all that they can do each day"

What "Working at Capacity" Actually Means 402:00

- "Do all that can be done" does NOT simply mean:
 - Working hard
 - Hustling
 - Grinding
- It means working at full capacity — a much higher bar
- Most people hustle for 90 minutes or 4 hours and think that's their max
 - In reality, they still waste large amounts of time on social media, meaningless distractions, and idle habits
 - Brandon's challenge: "What if you filled all that time with going after goals?"
- True capacity looks like:
 - Every available hour directed toward the goal
 - Going to sleep exhausted from pursuing your objectives
- Brandon's honest assessment: "Most of you have never done that. Definitely not more than a day or two at a time."
- The second half of the principle is equally important: "each day" — meaning:
 - 7 days a week
 - Your birthday
 - Christmas, 4th of July, Kwanzaa, Juneteenth, Rosh Hashanah
 - No days off because you "deserve" a break — "You deserve to fail, year after year, the way you've been doing. Wouldn't it be great to try something different?"

The Prescription: Max Effort, Every Day, Until You Win 518:00

- Brandon acknowledges the "what if I do all that and still fail?" objection:
 - His answer: he has never personally met anyone who truly followed this principle and failed
 - Everyone he knows who genuinely did all they could each day — even just a handful of people — hit their goals
 - If you were somehow the first to do it and fail: you would still be proud, still make progress, still be closer to success than before

- "Win or lose, you'll probably still make some progress. You'll still certainly be in a better position than what you were now."
- The explicit instruction:
 - Do NOT lower the target to something easier
 - Instead, increase the effort — max effort, every day
 - Continue for exactly as long as it takes: "Until you win. Until you win."
- The promise: "If you do that, the second half of this year will end way better than the first half ended."

➡ Online Coaching Offer 567:00

- Brandon still takes online coaching clients focused on getting in the best shape of their life before year-end
 - Link to apply is in the video description
 - One-on-one online training with Brandon as coach
 - Includes: personalized diet plan, workout plan, and daily check-ins
- How the coaching works:
 - Brandon messages clients every day to track adherence to macros and workouts
 - Accountability is real — "You ain't going to [mess] up my reputation sitting around staying fat and weak"
- Application process:
 - Fill out the application (takes about 5 minutes)
 - Within ~5 minutes of submitting, you receive a text message
 - You must reply to that text — no reply means your application is not seen
 - If you reply, Brandon will assess whether you're a good fit to work together