

It comes down to excuses

Channel: Tim Luong · Published: Sep 02, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/yMbCJRywT58> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

A raw, high-energy motivational short dismissing excuses and glorifying a relentless work cycle — 3 a.m. starts, no real rest, just wake up and work.

Contents

-  The 3 A.M. Work Mentality
-  It All Comes Down to Excuses

The 3 A.M. Work Mentality 0:00

- The speaker frames 3:00 a.m. as "halftime" — not the end of a night, but the midpoint of a grind session
  - Implies work started well before midnight and continues past 3 a.m.
- The described cycle is stripped down to its bare elements:
  - Sunrise
  - Rest (minimal)
  - Wake up
  - Work — then repeat
- Described as "the balance" — sarcastically or sincerely framing this punishing schedule as a sustainable lifestyle
- References being part of a "work machine" — self-identification with relentless output
  - Delivered with enthusiasm: "I love it, baby"

It All Comes Down to Excuses 0:24

- The closing message is blunt: people who don't operate this way are "still got your running excuses"
- The entire video's thesis is captured in this single line — no elaboration, no sympathy

"Still got your running excuses, man. That's what it is."

- The implication: the only thing separating grinders from everyone else is the willingness to stop making excuses