

There's a secret I stick to when it comes to luxury purchases 🤫

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Sep 05, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/kfQokJj2RKc> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Brandon Carter's personal rule: any luxury watch over $5,000 must be tied to a monumental goal or life event, turning each piece into a meaningful trophy rather than a financial instrument to trade.

Contents

- 🏆 The Rule: Watches as Trophies
- ⌚ Each Watch and Its Story

🏆 The Rule: Watches as Trophies 0:00

- Core personal rule: any watch over $5,000 must be connected to a goal or something monumental
 - This framing transforms each purchase from a luxury indulgence into a commemorative trophy
 - He explicitly rejects the "watch flipper" mindset — no worrying about resale value, no selling them off
 - The watches are meant to be kept and cherished as permanent markers of achievement

⌚ Each Watch and Its Story 0:22

- Richard Mille (RM): bought when he surpassed 1 million YouTube subscribers AND 1 million Instagram followers — both milestones hit in roughly the same month
- "Bust down" Audemars Piguet Royal Oak: commemorates his 40th birthday and, in his own words, "the start of my midlife crisis"
- AP (Audemars Piguet): marks a record-breaking year in his business
- Rolux: a gift from friend and collaborator Derek Moneyberg — given after Brandon helped him launch a product that generated over $1 million in sales
- Cartier: a gift from his girlfriend, purchased entirely with her own money
- Final watch: a birthday gift from one of his business partners, Amber

Every watch has a story — they're not status symbols to be traded, they're personal monuments to moments that mattered.