The Wake-Up Call: Four Months Left 0:00

- Four months remain in 2026 — still enough time to accomplish yearly goals
- Most people have already quit by this point in the year
 - Carter frames this as an opportunity: the field has thinned, and those who stay in can still win
- His claim is grounded in coaching experience with thousands of people in both fitness and business

The One Thing: Schedule Every Hour 0:22

- The single habit Carter credits for success: plan every hour of every day in your calendar
- "Everything" means literally everything — no exceptions:
 - Wake-up time
 - Bedtime
 - Meals
 - Time with kids and spouse
 - Work on your business
 - Any other priority
- Carter has practiced this himself for over 15 years
- If forced to choose only one thing that made him successful, this is it
- Getting more done each day is the direct benefit — but there is also a powerful indirect benefit (see next section)

The Accidental Bad Habit Eliminator 0:45

- A surprising side effect: bad habits disappear automatically because you never schedule them
 - You won't put mindless scrolling in the calendar
 - You won't schedule video games
 - You won't schedule other time-wasting or harmful activities
- The mechanism is passive — you don't need willpower to fight bad habits directly; a full, intentional schedule simply leaves no room for them

"You will actually get rid of all your bad habits on accident."

The 4-Month Challenge and Guarantee 0:45

- Carter's direct challenge: start calendar-blocking every hour for the next four months
- His explicit promise: you will accomplish more in these four months than in the last 12 months combined
- He frames this as a guarantee — applicable to everyone who follows through
- The underlying logic: consistent, structured execution over even a short window compounds dramatically compared to an unplanned full year
