Over-Optimization in Miami 0:00

- Tim describes his default Saturday in Miami as rigidly structured:
 - Already up and worked out early
 - Spending the rest of the day working at his desk
 - When friends invite him out, he typically just keeps working and only steps out briefly
- He labels this state as being "overly optimized" — every hour is accounted for and productive

The New York Contrast 0:00

- When Tim is in New York, his mindset shifts noticeably
 - He doesn't mind waiting 20 minutes for a table at a restaurant
 - He goes out and hangs around with friends without a rigid agenda
 - The city's social energy makes spontaneity feel natural rather than wasteful

Pros and Cons 0:22

- Tim acknowledges both sides of the spectrum:
 - Pro of the optimized Miami routine: essentially gaining an extra workday on the weekend
 - Con: it can trap you in a loop with no breathing room or social connection
- His takeaway: "it's good to break out a routine" — even for someone who values productivity, stepping away periodically is worthwhile

"Sometimes, bro, it's good to break out a routine."
