The Winning Ad — What It Is and Why It Works 0:00

- A TikTok ad promoting a cordless/wireless pressure washer has generated $300,000 in sales in the last 28 days with 28 million views
- The ad is 1 minute 6 seconds long and has multiple scenes
- To the untrained eye it looks like a real UGC video — it is entirely AI-generated
- Arie's own brand does over $300K/month and uses AI ads; he also runs a Meta ads agency
- Key insight: good AI ads can perform extremely well on both TikTok and Meta
- The core psychological mechanism the ad uses:
  - Demonstrate the product solving a problem visually
  - Make the viewer estimate the value (looks expensive)
  - Surprise with a lower price than expected
  - Prove the demonstration harder

- Stack more value
- Deliver the call to action

"The core principle here is to make the viewer conclude the selling point before the advertiser has to say it."

- Mental sequence a viewer goes through:
  - "That looks useful"
  - "That looks expensive"
  - "Okay, it actually works"
  - "Wait, it also does that"
  - "That's a lot of value — what's the offer?"
  - "Boom. I want it."

- Find a viral ad in your niche on TikTok
- Google a TikTok downloader and download the video in HD
- Upload the video file to ChatGPT or Gemini
- Use this prompt (or similar): "Break down the psychology of this meta ad so that we can reverse engineer it and create a new ad from the template"
  - Note: calling it a
