Executive Summary

Brandon Carter outlines a five-account banking strategy that automatically routes income into fixed percentage buckets — operations, investing, taxes, and fun — to enforce saving, grow wealth, and prevent lifestyle creep.

Contents

-  Account 1: Income Account
-  Account 2: Operations Account (30%)
-  Account 3: Investment Account (50%)
-  Account 4: Tax Account (15%)
-  Account 5: Baller Account (5%)
-  How to Set It Up at Your Bank

Account 1: Income Account 0:00

- The central hub where all income is deposited — job, side hustle, or any other source
 - No debit cards attached to this account
 - No automatic payments linked here
 - Its sole purpose is to collect incoming money
- From here, money is manually distributed to the other four accounts according to set percentages

Account 2: Operations Account (30%) 0:22

- The account you actually live out of — all bills and living expenses are paid from here
- Receives 30% of total income
 - Example: earning $5,000/month → only $1,500 goes to operations
 - Carter's note: if $1,500 isn't enough to cover your expenses, your income is too low — the system forces you to confront that gap
- Suggested fixes if 30% isn't enough to live on:
 - Get a second job
 - Start a side hustle

- Drive Uber on weekends
- Do whatever is necessary to increase income rather than increasing the operations percentage

Account 3: Investment Account (50%) 0:22

- The largest slice — 50% of income goes here, making investing the top financial priority
- Possible investment vehicles mentioned:
 - Stock market
 - Real estate
 - Your own business
- Goal: "rise above the ranks of poverty and build a better future for you and your family"

"If you're not willing to sacrifice for your goals, then your goals become the sacrifice."

Account 4: Tax Account (15%) 0:44

- 15% of income is set aside specifically for taxes
 - Especially important for self-employed individuals or those with side hustles who don't have taxes withheld automatically
 - Prevents being caught off guard by a tax bill

Account 5: Baller Account (5%) 0:44

- 5% of income reserved purely for enjoyment and rewards
 - Meant to be spent on something "fun, silly, stupid" — Carter's words
 - Described as "almost a waste of money" by design
- Purpose: reward yourself along the way so discipline feels sustainable, not punishing

How to Set It Up at Your Bank 1:06

- Carter recommends keeping all five accounts at the same bank for easy internal transfers
- Setup steps:
 - Walk into your bank in person
 - Tell the banker you need to open five accounts
 - No bank will refuse — it is a standard request
 - Staff may look at you strangely or try to talk you out of it
 - Carter's advice: "be firm in your conviction" and proceed regardless
