

What are the 10/10 skills that make you a dangerous salesperson?

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Aug 19, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/szsY7OnCB3Y> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Brandon Carter, who built a sales team doing over $20M in revenue, breaks down 5 elite sales attributes shared by his top performers — focused on psychology, active listening, and self-improvement habits.

Contents

-  Skill 1: Create Strategic Friction
-  Skill 2: Question-Focused Selling
-  Skill 3: Strategic Mirroring
-  Skill 4: Take Notes on the Call
-  Skill 5: Review Your Sales Calls Every Day
-  Free Resource: Fitness Revenue Roadmap

Skill 1: Create Strategic Friction 0:00

- The core idea: don't come across as needy or pushy — instead, actively pull away from the prospect
 - Example line to use: "Seems like things are going pretty well for you. Why not just keep doing what you're doing?"
 - This reversal of pressure causes the prospect to start selling themselves to you
 - They begin articulating why they actually need your help, which is far more persuasive than anything you could say
- Rooted in the psychology of scarcity and disinterest — people want what seems less available

Skill 2: Question-Focused Selling 0:22

- 90% of what you say on the call should be questions
 - The goal is NOT to convince the prospect to buy
 - The goal is to ask questions that lead them to convince themselves
- Shifts the dynamic from salesperson-pushes to prospect-pulls
 - Far less resistance, far higher close rates

Skill 3: Strategic Mirroring 0:22

- While taking notes, listen carefully to the exact language and words the prospect uses
 - Then adopt their language throughout the rest of the call
- This is described as a neural linguistic programming (NLP) technique that builds rapport
 - Concrete example: if the prospect says "getting shredded," you stop saying "losing fat" entirely
 - Every reference you make going forward uses the phrase "getting shredded"
- The underlying mechanism: people feel more understood and connected when they hear their own words reflected back

Skill 4: Take Notes on the Call 0:46

- Note-taking forces you to actually listen rather than mentally preparing your next line
 - A common and costly mistake: asking a prospect a question they already answered earlier in the call
 - Brandon reviewed thousands of sales calls and says this happens frequently
 - He calls it "probably one of the quickest ways to lose trust"
- Active listening, enabled by note-taking, keeps the conversation coherent and builds credibility

Skill 5: Review Your Sales Calls Every Day 1:08

- Analogy: pro athletes always watch game footage to identify what they can improve
 - Salespeople should treat their recorded calls the same way
- Daily review allows you to catch mistakes, spot patterns, and continuously refine technique

Free Resource: Fitness Revenue Roadmap 1:08

- Brandon offers a free tool called the Fitness Revenue Roadmap aimed at online fitness trainers
 - Answer a few questions; the tool analyzes your answers and your profile
 - It then identifies the fastest path for you to start making money as an online trainer
- To access: comment the word "revenue" and he will send it directly to you
- Note: the transcript title references "10 out of 10 skills" but only 5 are covered in this short-form video