Why not them, why not us? #businessgrowth #motivation #sucessjourney #success #mindset

Channel: Greg Lav · Published: Oct 20, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/IGi19fN3orA Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

After landing in New York and seeing 150–200 private jets, Greg Lav challenges viewers to ask why not them — arguing that hard work and belief are all that separate ordinary people from extraordinary success.

📑 Contents

- ✈️ The Private Jet Terminal Moment
- 💡 The Core Mindset Challenge
- 🚀 The Call to Action

✈️ The Private Jet Terminal Moment 0:00

- Greg flew back home from Minneapolis and landed in New York
  - Upon arrival, he entered a private terminal that was extremely crowded
  - He counted roughly 150 to 200 private jets — described as the most impressive aircraft he had ever seen in his life
- He shared the scene on his social media story in real time
  - The image of that many luxury private planes in one place sparked an immediate reflective question

💡 The Core Mindset Challenge 0:00

- The question he posed publicly: "You see 150 luxury private jets in an airport terminal — why not you? Why not us?"
- His direct assertion: the people who own those jets are not better than us
  - This is the central belief driving the message — success is not reserved for a superior class of people
  - The gap between those owners and the viewer is effort and mindset, not inherent ability or worthiness

> "They are not better than us, guys. Let's make it happen."

🚀 The Call to Action 0:21

- Greg observes that every time he lands at private airports across different states, he sees hundreds of private jets

    - This is framed as evidence that opportunity is abundant, not scarce
    - It exists in every state, in every market
- The formula he presents is simple and two-part:
    - Start working hard
    - Recognize that this level of success is available and attainable for you to claim
- The tone is a direct rallying call to younger audiences (