

Why not us? #businessgrowth #motivation

#sucessjourney #mindset #successboost #inspiration

Channel: Greg Lav · Published: Sep 24, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/J_b7yn67lcw Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Greg Lav returns from Minneapolis, sees a packed private-jet terminal in New York, and turns the sight into a rallying call: the people flying those jets are no better than us — opportunity is everywhere, so start working hard and claim it.

Contents

- ✈️ The Private Jet Terminal Moment
- 💡 The Motivational Call to Action

The Private Jet Terminal Moment 0:00

- Greg had just flown home from Minneapolis and landed in New York
 - He arrived at the private terminal (FBO/private aviation lounge)
 - The terminal was extremely crowded — he estimates 150 to 200 private jets, which he calls "the craziest planes I've ever seen in my life"
- He posted the scene to his Instagram/social Story in real time
 - The caption/question he posed: "You see 150 luxury private jets in an airport lounge — why not you?"
- This observation becomes the spark for the motivational message that follows

The Motivational Call to Action 0:22

- Core belief Greg shares: the people who own those jets are not better than us
 - "They're not better than us, guys" — his direct quote to the audience
- He says this level of success is accessible and available to be claimed
- He notes that every private airport he lands at across different states has roughly 100 private jets present — reinforcing that this wealth is widespread, not rare
- His two-step call to action:
 - Start working hard
 - Recognize that this lifestyle is available to you and go take it

"Why not you? Why not us? They're not better than us, guys. Let's make it happen."

- The overarching theme: reframe elite success as an open opportunity rather than something reserved for a special class of people