

Don't let the haters win.

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Aug 27, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/bveGjxhBfBc> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Brandon Carter argues that your haters and doubters are a powerful motivational tool — document them, revisit them daily, and use the threat of proving them right as fuel to stay consistent on your goals.

Contents

-  The Hater List: Build Your Motivation Weapon
-  The Binary Truth: Proving Them Right or Wrong

The Hater List: Build Your Motivation Weapon 0:00

- The core tactic: make a written list of every person who wronged you, hated on you, or said you couldn't do it
 - Store it in your notes app
 - Pin it to the top so it's always the first thing you see
- When to look at the list:
 - Every morning
 - Every time you're supposed to take action toward your goals but don't feel like it
- The reframe: skipping your actions = letting the haters win
 - "They want you to skip your workout."
 - "They want you to quit on your diet."
 - "They want you to not work on your business."
- The motivational hook: don't make the haters happy — use their negativity as fuel instead of letting it drain you

The Binary Truth: Proving Them Right or Wrong 0:26

- The sharp reframe on haters: if someone says you can't do something and you don't do it, they weren't hating — they were making an accurate assessment
 - This removes the victim narrative and places full accountability on you
- There are only two outcomes:
 - You quit → you prove them right

- You execute → you prove them wrong

"You're either proving them right or you're proving them wrong. Choose wisely."

- The closing challenge: the choice is entirely yours — pick which side of that equation you want to live on