

8/10 Is Peak Life

Channel: Onem · Published: Aug 27, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/bNSwkqgmskl> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Applying the 80/20 rule to lifestyle design: an 8/10 life gives roughly 80% of the happiness of an ultra-luxury 10/10 life for about 20% of the cost, while avoiding security risks, headaches, and stress.

Contents

-  The Supercar Example: 80% of the Joy at 20% of the Cost
-  Location Arbitrage: Marbella vs. Montenegro
-  The 8/10 Lifestyle Philosophy
-  The Attention & Security Problem with 10/10

The Supercar Example: 80% of the Joy at 20% of the Cost 0:00

- Many people aspire to drive a Lamborghini, Ferrari, or Bugatti with the roof down in a place like Dubai
 - This is framed as the archetypal "10/10" lifestyle goal
 - The core argument: you can capture 80% of the happiness for roughly 20% of the cost
- The proposed alternative: a Mercedes CLE convertible with the roof down
 - Estimated at approximately 20% of the cost of a supercar (or less)
 - Delivers a nearly equivalent experiential thrill — open top, luxury feel, aspirational image

Location Arbitrage: Marbella vs. Montenegro 0:24

- Pairing a more affordable car with a more affordable destination amplifies the cost savings further
 - Marbella is cited as significantly cheaper than Dubai while still being glamorous
 - Budva, Montenegro is offered as an even more budget-friendly option
- The combined effect: driving a convertible through a scenic coastal location still produces ~80% of the happiness
 - The cost of the entire setup lands at roughly 20% of the Dubai-supercar scenario
- This is explicitly labeled the "80/20 rule of life setup"

The 8/10 Lifestyle Philosophy 0:45

- Many people engage in "big baller" spending without realising diminishing returns kick in sharply past a certain point

- The same enjoyment is available at a much smaller scale
- The smaller scale comes without the security risks, hassle, and stress of ultra-luxury living
- The speaker's personal conclusion: an 8/10 lifestyle is the optimal point
 - It balances happiness with practical effectiveness "across the board"
 - "Anything above an eight just becomes a headache"

👁️ The Attention & Security Problem with 10/10 1:10

- Two illustrative examples are used to make the 10/10 drawback concrete:
 - Women: A 9 or 10 brings excessive attention — celebrity-level admiration, ego inflation, drama — whereas an 8 still means "an unbelievable life" without those complications
 - Cars: A 10/10 car (e.g., a Bugatti or top-tier supercar) makes the owner a security risk and a target, whereas an 8/10 car like a Land Rover Defender 110 signals "normal guy making good money" — aspirational but not a magnet for threats
- The underlying logic: peak desirability invites peak problems; sitting just below the top tier captures most of the upside while shedding most of the downside

The sweet spot isn't the absolute best — it's one tier below, where the joy is nearly the same but the headaches are a fraction.