Habit 1: Train Before the World Wakes Up 0:00

- Start your day at 5 AM
 - Working out before the rest of the world is awake gives you a head start and sets a disciplined tone for the entire day

Habit 2: Read at Least 90 Minutes Daily 0:00

- Minimum 90 minutes of reading every single day
 - The compounding effect: doing this consistently for one year can make you an expert in virtually any field
 - Reading is framed as a long-term investment in intellectual mastery, not just a casual activity

Habit 3: Get Sunlight Within 30 Minutes of Waking 0:00

- Expose yourself to natural sunlight within 30 minutes of waking up

- Signals your body to wake up and activates your circadian rhythm
- Downstream effect: because your body gets a clear morning wake signal, it naturally becomes tired at night — making it easier to fall asleep
- Regulates the full sleep-wake cycle, not just the morning

Habit 4: No Phone for the First Hour 0:21

- Zero phone use during the first hour of the day
 - Mornings should be reserved entirely for achievement and intentional action
 - Starting the day with mindless scrolling is described as "demoralizing" — it puts you in a reactive, distracted state before you've done anything productive
 - Protect the morning as sacred output time

Habit 5: Cold Shower Every Morning 0:21

- Take a cold shower every single morning without exception
 - Studies cited show that people who take cold showers get sick significantly less often
 - Carter's personal claim: he has not been sick in 11 years
 - His reasoning (blunt framing): "It's hard to keep working when you're sniffing like the weak."
 - Cold showers are positioned as a discipline and immunity tool combined

Habit 6: Track Every Dollar You Spend 0:43

- Track and categorize every single dollar you spend
 - The goal is to know exactly where every dollar goes at all times
 - Mindset reframe: treat every dollar like a bullet you will use in your war against poverty
 - This framing elevates financial awareness from bookkeeping to a survival and warfare mentality
 - Financial intentionality is non-negotiable for peak performance

Habit 7: One Hour of Deep Work Before Responding to Anyone 0:43

- Complete at least one hour of deep, focused work every morning before checking messages or emails
 - Accomplish your most important task before other people start loading their problems onto you
 - The logic: your peak cognitive energy exists early in the day — spend it on your priorities, not on others' demands
 - Reactive communication (emails, texts, calls) is explicitly deprioritized until after this block

Habit 8: Minimum 10,000 Steps Daily 1:06

- Target a minimum of 10,000 steps per day
 - Carter personally targets 20,000 steps per day and reports hitting that goal nearly every day

- Daily movement is treated as non-negotiable baseline physical activity, separate from formal training

Habit 9: In Bed by 10 PM 1:06

- Be in bed by 10 PM every night
 - This makes waking up early (5 AM) sustainable without feeling exhausted throughout the day
 - Sharp warning: "If you're tired, you've already retired."
 - Being drowsy is called "foolish" — fatigue is framed as a choice and a character flaw, not an inevitability
 - Sleep timing is the foundation that makes all other early-morning habits possible

Habit 10: Call Your Parents Every Week 1:06

- Call your parents at least once a week
 - Closing message and the most emotionally resonant habit: success means nothing if you forget where you came from
 - Positioned as the habit that ties ambition back to gratitude and human connection
 - Intentionally placed last as the habit that gives all the others meaning
