Executive Summary

A brief comedic exchange where one person preaches living in the moment over social media, but is immediately called out for only doing so because he already has an internet connection.

Contents

-  The Wi-Fi Dispute
-  The "Be Present" Lecture
-  The Callout

The Wi-Fi Dispute 0:00

- Someone is questioned for not obtaining the Wi-Fi password
 - Response: "I swear to god, there's no Wi-Fi"
 - Suggestion given: get the Wi-Fi details from Matt

The "Be Present" Lecture 0:00

- A person (presumably the one with connection) jumps in with an unsolicited life lesson
 - "Be present. Be present. Bro, be present. Live life."
 - Expands into a mini-speech: "Sometimes you got to live in the moment. You don't live in the social media. Live in the moment and you need to enjoy this exciting moment."

The Callout 0:00

- The lecture is immediately undercut by a sharp observation from someone else
 - "He says that when he has connection."
- The irony is the punchline: the "be present" advice only comes easily from someone who isn't actually missing out on Wi-Fi
 - The preacher acknowledges it indirectly but doubles down on the message anyway
