📋 Executive Summary

Dating coach Deni tests four race-specific Tinder profiles (Indian-American, white European, Black American, Korean-Asian) and reveals that generic profiles are dead — each ethnicity must build a unique niche persona to maximize matches, text chemistry, and real-world dates.

🎯 Core Philosophy: Niche Texting & Race 0:00

- Generic profiles and copy-paste openers are completely dead
  - "You can't use dog-shit lines anymore, like 'what's missing from your pictures'" — Deni
  - A shirtless photo with no context or purpose adds nothing
- Every profile must be built around a specific niche, aesthetic, and goal tailored to the individual
  - Four clients tested: all different ethnicities, all with distinct personal insecurities
    - Indian-American: worried about his ethnicity and being perceived as undesirable
    - White European (Irish, Sweden-based): receding hairline concerns
    - Black American: lack of confidence, near-virgin, 26 years old
    - Korean-Asian: 5'3" height — the biggest curveball of the four
- The experiment is designed to be a fair test: all men are in their mid-to-late 20s (26–28), ordinary-looking, not exceptional
- Key principle: opposites attract — each ethnicity tends to pull women from a contrasting demographic
- Six sections covered: niche texting & race, then each of the four races, then a final comparison

🇮🇳 Race #1: Indian-American — The Exotic Prince Strategy 1:57

- Client profile:
  - 28 years old, virgin at start, business owner (tutoring/business)
  - Financially stable; dating was his only gap
  - Result: 1,500 likes on Tinder
- Profile aesthetic chosen: "Exotic Prince Traveling the World"
  - First photo: positions him as a business owner and provider/daddy figure
  - Traveling highlight photos: presented as a Dubai-based wealthy tourist temporarily in America
    - Actual car: ordinary — profile implies Lamborghini-level wealth, which is fabricated for the narrative
  - Sauna photo: signals self-care and lifestyle
  - Physique photo: shows build without being a meaningless shirtless shot
  - Final photo: slightly wilder energy, pulled back to balance the profile
- Core strategy: novelty + exotic appeal
  - Frame him as only being in the US temporarily — creates urgency and attraction
  - Girls are more willing to move fast because they feel the window is closing
  - Works for: Indian, Arab, Afghan, Palestinian — any tanned/non-black ethnicity
- Texting style — "love bombing" and passenger princess framing:
  - Example opener leads to girl saying "best way to get sushi is if I ate them off your biceps" — profile primed her to talk about his arms
  - Girl who didn't even like fish said "I'd go for you" — making exceptions purely because he's a novelty
  - Texting tactic: "We're going to make this the best date ever for you"
  - Suggest Italian restaurant — Deni's universal rule: "Every single girl loves Italian. I don't think I've ever met a girl who doesn't."
  - Light sexual escalation (whipped cream reference) then pivot to logistics
  - Moved conversation to Instagram; closed on a weekend date (she was a university student/dancing coach)
- Additional tactics Deni personally uses as an Afghan-British man:
  - Tells girls English isn't his first language — used as a "get out of jail free card" when saying something awkward
  - Claims to be from Palestine, says he survived the war, tells girls he's from Spain
  - "I take advantage of my ethnic minority and it has helped me do incredibly well with women"
- Downside of this ethnicity in dating:
  - Girls frequently suspect he will love-bomb them for years then return home to marry within his own race
  - Common TikTok-driven stereotype: men of Middle Eastern/Indian background are seen as likely to cheat or be disloyal
  - Girls feel insecure long-term with these men because of this cultural perception
- Most consistent match volume across all four profiles

🇪🇺 Race #2: White European — The Clean Lifestyle Profile 10:33

- Client profile:
  - 27 years old, Irish, lives in Sweden for work, engineer
  - Result: 1,000 likes on Tinder
  - Match mix: ethnic girls, Black girls, and some white/blonde girls too
- Profile aesthetic: "Clean Neurotypical Lifestyle"
  - Athletic photos — sport (paddle, swimming, etc.)
  - BBQ photo — demonstrates domestic life skills
  - Ski trip photo — aspirational but culturally familiar to target demographic
  - Lads holiday photo, shirtless — social proof
  - Night out/club photo — neurotypical social hobby
  - One selfie — makes women feel safe and approachable
  - No exotic or high-status manufactured narrative — it's ordinary but well-curated
- Core vibe communicated: safety, provider energy, shared cultural reference points
  - "Girls feel safe. Girls feel provided for because he has skills in life that they desire."
  - Hobbies (BBQ, skiing, nights out) match what his target demographic would do themselves
- Texting style — banter-led, leading the conversation:
  - Girls are drier and more forward than with the Indian profile — less immediately compliant
  - He must lead the conversation rather than having girls fold instantly
  - Girls from similar cultural backgrounds "rage bait" — they push back, test, banter
  - Example: girl says "I won't shut up" and jokes about food preferences — playful friction
  - Strategy: relate to her, make her feel accepted, mirror her cooking interest (BBQ photo provides the hook)
  - Close: propose a cooking date; tell her she'll be his wife — she wants to go but insists on "wine and dine first"
  - Still slept with her on the first date despite her stated "I'm not that type of girl" boundary
- Key contrast vs. Indian profile:
  - Indian profile girls: immediate compliance, "I'll do whatever you say" energy
  - White European profile girls: more friction, rage bait banter, but equally closeable
- Long-term advantage: white European men maintain girls the longest
  - Less cultural friction = fewer long-term disagreements
  - Girls don't have the "he'll leave and marry someone from his own culture" fear
  - Easiest to build a consistent rotation over time
- Love-bombing does NOT work for white guys the same way:
  - "If you do that as a white guy, girls will see you as weaker and more soft"
  - The exotic/provider fantasy is race-specific — it doesn't transfer to white men

🖤 Race #3: Black American — High-Energy, High-Risk 15:27

- Client profile:
  - 26 years old, practically a virgin, wanted confidence and a girlfriend
  - Result: 1,000+ likes on Tinder
- Profile aesthetic: maximum masculine energy
  - High-dominance, sexually bold visual framing — "I'm daddy here"
  - Also includes a suit photo to show he's a civilized, put-together person
  - Overall vibe: bold, sexual, high-status masculine frame
- Texting style — direct and sexual:
  - Example opener: "I've got 70 ways to make you happy"
  - Girl responds: "Are you even real?" — they offered to FaceTime
  - Girl's response: "Yeah, come over" — extremely fast escalation to sex
  - Conversations are kept short deliberately: "You don't want to talk too long over text. Make things happen in real life."
- The big tradeoff:
  - Easiest profile to get fast, sexual, one-night-stand results
  - But: most inconsistent results overall — girls flake more often
  - Less likely to maintain long-term or repeated contact with the same girl
  - Girls do not tend to stick around after the initial encounter
- Comparison summary for Black American profile:
  - Fast sex: ✅ easiest
  - Consistency of matches over time: ❌ lowest
  - Long-term relationship potential via apps: ❌ weakest

🇰🇷 Race #4: Korean-Asian — The K-Pop Boyfriend 19:42

- Client profile:
  - Mid-to-late 20s, 5'3" — the major curveball (all others were 5'8"–5'10")
  - Data analyst, in the US temporarily for studies
  - Result: 1,000 likes despite being 5'3" — described as "stupidly well"
- Profile aesthetic: K-Pop Star / Safe Boyfriend Material
  - Positioned as the romantic lead from a K-drama
  - Selling the fantasy of: long-term relationship, travel together, happy ending
  - Targeted girls who self-identified as wanting a "gamer boyfriend" (Minecraft, Roblox bios)
  - Communicates: safe, romantic, will take her back to Asia, boyfriend-for-life energy
- Texting style — long-term framing, light on sexuality:

    - Opened with a custom unique style specific to his persona
    - Talked about having kids and selling "the life and dream"
    - Framed the idea of traveling together and building a future
    - Touched on sex lightly — "didn't want to go too hard with it"
    - Goal: close her on a date within a reasonable time frame
- Key limitations:
    - One-night stands are very difficult for Asian men via apps — girls don't respond well to being sexualized in text
    - Sexual escalation works better in person on the date, not in the texting phase
    - Bold/sexual openers that work for Black American profiles do not translate here
- Long-term consistency: strong for securing genuine girlfriend-type relationships
    - "Safe lover boys that are going to provide them with that happy ending they're looking for"

🏆 Final Comparison: Who Wins What 22:17

Ethnicity	Match Volume	Consistency	Speed to Sex	Long-Term Retention	Best At
Indian/Arab/Afghan	Highest	Most consistent	Fast (novelty-driven)	Low (girls fear abandonment)	Volume & variety
White European	High	Very consistent	Moderate	Highest	Maintaining rotation & LTR
Black American	High	Least consistent	Fastest	Low (girls flake)	One-night stands
Korean/Asian	Solid (1,000 despite 5'3")	Consistent for LTR	Slow via text	High for LTR	Securing girlfriends

- Indian/Arab/Afghan:
    - Most consistent results overall; highest match volume
    - Girls feel insecure long-term — common fear: "He'll love-bomb me for 4 years then go marry someone from his own country"
    - This stereotype is TikTok-amplified and widely believed by women
- White European:
    - Best at keeping girls long-term and building a consistent rotation
    - No cultural friction; girls don't have "he'll leave" fears
    - "The guys who keep the girls the longest definitely goes to the white guys"
- Black American:

    - Fastest to sex, but results are the most inconsistent
    - Girls most likely to flake or not return
- Korean/Asian:
    - Consistently good for long-term girlfriend results
    - Not effective for one-night stands through apps alone
- TikTok's role in all of this:
    - Women's perceptions of each ethnicity are heavily shaped by TikTok trends and memes
    - E.g., the "Arab/Indian man will cheat and return home" narrative is a TikTok-driven assumption
    - Deni teases a future video on "the law of TikTok" — how platform trends shape female dating behavior and how men can exploit it

> "Every race has a different advantage and a different way they can portray themselves. If your game isn't cringe, you're not doing well enough — that's why you don't get pussy."

📅 Bonus: How Deni's Own Dates Actually Run 24:32

- Deni's date formula (Afghan/Arab exotic persona):
    - Asks the girl at the very start: "Can I go back to your apartment and leave my bags?" — brings an extra bag specifically for this purpose
    - He drops his bags at her place before the date even begins
    - Takes her for one or two drinks, walks around the city, does romantic things
    - Then: "Can I grab my bags from yours?" — returns to the apartment and closes
    - "It's so stupidly easy when you already have a reason to be in her apartment"
- Max's (white guy) date formula:
    - Bar, then bowling or other games and activities
    - Requires more dates on average before sex — more groundwork needed
    - Max does better in cultures where he's the exotic (e.g., India, Dubai, Middle East) — opposites attract flips in his favor there
- Important caveat:
    - Deni explicitly warns viewers not to compare their results to his or Max's
    - "My results and Max's are exceptional. Compare yourself to the four ordinary guys in this video."
    - The four clients are the realistic benchmark for average men
- Deni expresses interest in a follow-up video exploring race in dating further, noting how "each race's performance is so unique to one another"
    - Also hints at a "law of TikTok" video if audience requests it
