Executive Summary

Brandon Carter delivers a blunt motivational truth: you only achieve goals framed as absolute musts. Every failed goal was a want, not a necessity — and your quality of life depends on closing that gap.

🎯 The Core Principle: Wants vs. Musts

- The central claim: "You only get what you MUST HAVE"
 - If a goal was truly a must, you would have found a way to make it happen — no exceptions
 - Every goal you have ever failed to hit was a want, not a must, by definition
- The reframe: treat your goals like your life depends on them
 - The reasoning: the quality of your life literally does depend on whether you hit your goals
 - The standard has to shift from "I'd like to" to "there is no other option"

"If it was truly a MUST, you would've made it happen."
