Do our cans look the same to you? #businessgrowth #motivation #sucessjourney #success #mindset

Channel: Greg Lav · Published: Oct 12, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/DqDU5_YQxIY Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

A candid product design conversation about Bloom beverage cans, arguing that shelf visibility requires dramatic color differentiation by flavor — not small fruit graphics — so shoppers notice something new and stop to look.

📑 Contents

- 🏪 The Shelf Visibility Problem
- 🎨 The Color Circle Proposal
- 🍓 The Case for Bolder Design
- 💡 Why Limited Editions Work — and the Core Lesson

🏪 The Shelf Visibility Problem 0:00

- The speaker opens by noting they can only identify a can's flavor when it is facing them directly
  - When cans are displayed on a store shelf at various angles — sideways, turned, tilted — the flavor is unreadable
  - This is framed as a fundamental packaging problem that hurts the shopper experience

🎨 The Color Circle Proposal 0:00

- The design team proposes coloring the circular elements on the can to match each flavor
  - The speaker reacts positively: