These two things are the reason why you haven't hit $1M

📋 Executive Summary

Most businesses never reach $1M/year because of exactly two problems: no repeatable system for generating leads, and undercharging due to lack of confidence. Solve both to scale.

- 🚫 Problem 1: No Repeatable Lead Generation System
- 💸 Problem 2: Not Charging Enough

🚫 Problem 1: No Repeatable Lead Generation System 0:00

- The single most common pattern Tim observes when speaking with business owners is the absence of a consistent, repeatable system for bringing in new leads
  - Owners simply cannot figure out how to get a sufficient number of customers on a reliable basis
- The root cause is almost always insufficient volume of outreach or content attempts
  - Most owners haven't done enough repetitions in their chosen channel to get good at it
  - Without enough attempts, you can't identify what actually works — and therefore can't double down on it
- Three channels mentioned where this volume problem shows up:
  - Direct outreach to businesses (cold outreach / B2B prospecting)
  - Organic content creation
  - Paid advertising
- The fix implied: do significantly more volume in your chosen channel until you develop the skill and data to know what converts, then focus exclusively on that

> "You haven't done enough attempts to become good enough to know what works, and therefore focus on it."

💸 Problem 2: Not Charging Enough 0:22

- The second recurring problem: business owners chronically underprice their services or products
  - The underlying cause is a confidence problem, not a market problem

    - Owners fear they won't be able to deliver on what they promise if they charge more
- Two compounding benefits of raising prices:
    - Charging higher prices forces you to actually deliver more value — it raises your own standards and execution
    - Customers perceive you as a more premium, differentiated product and are more willing to pay
- The contrast made explicit: a cheaper product makes buyers more hesitant; a higher-priced offer signals quality and attracts more committed clients
- The fix: build the confidence to charge what your offer is worth, knowing that the higher price will push you to rise to meet it
