Contents

- 💪 Fix #1: Your Body
- 😴 Fix #2: Your Sleep
- 🥗 Fix #3: Your Diet
- 💰 Fix #4: Your Money
- 👥 Fix #5: Your Circle
- 🤝 Fix #6: Your Word

💪 Fix #1: Your Body 0:00

- Get stronger and get leaner
 - Stop accepting low energy as a default state
 - Stop feeling uncomfortable in your own skin
- The implication is that physical condition directly affects confidence, energy, and discipline in all other areas of life

😴 Fix #2: Your Sleep 0:07

- Stop staying up all night scrolling on your phone
 - Late-night scrolling destroys your ability to feel focused and disciplined the following day
- Sleep is framed as a non-negotiable foundation for mental performance and self-control

🥗 Fix #3: Your Diet 0:14

- Stop using food as an emotional reward for a stressful day
 - Carter's phrase: stop "eating like a goddamn toddler"
 - "Eat like a man" — meaning eat with intention and discipline, not for comfort
- Poor diet is framed as a form of self-sabotage disguised as self-reward

Fix #4: Your Money 0:22

- Track every dollar you spend AND every dollar you make
 - Awareness of cash flow is the starting point for financial improvement
- Practical tip: connect all your accounts to ChatGPT and track spending for free
 - This removes the excuse of cost as a barrier to financial tracking

Fix #5: Your Circle 0:33

- The people around you shape who you become
 - If your circle is lazy, negative, broke, and unhealthy — you will eventually mirror those traits
- This is a direct application of the "you are the average of the people around you" principle
- The fix is implicit: deliberately choose to be around people who reflect who you want to become

Fix #6: Your Word 0:45

- Do what you say you're going to do — especially when no one is watching or holding you accountable
- Breaking promises to yourself has compounding consequences:
 - You begin to like yourself less
 - It erodes your confidence ("your cop" — likely shorthand for confidence/composure)
- Self-integrity is the foundation of self-respect; accountability to yourself matters more than external accountability

"You fix those six things and almost all of your problems will go."
