60 Days Left In The Year, By The Way

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Nov 02, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/yHdsQMQEVfY Source: description only

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter challenges the "wait until January" mindset by laying out his own disciplined 60-day end-of-year routine — daily training, weighed meals, early wake-ups, and intentional planning.

📑 Contents

- 🗓️ The 60-Day Wake-Up Call
- 💪 The 7-Habit Daily Blueprint

🗓️ The 60-Day Wake-Up Call

- With roughly 60 days remaining in the year, most people have mentally checked out
  - The common default: "I'll start fresh in January"
  - Carter reframes this as a missed opportunity — 60 days is meaningful time if used with intention

> "You don't need a new year. You need the next 60 days."

💪 The 7-Habit Daily Blueprint

- Carter shares exactly what his own 60-day stretch looks like, habit by habit:
  - Train every day, even when nobody's watching
    - Consistency is built in private, not for external validation
  - Weigh the food — steak, eggs, no guessing
    - Precision over estimation; keeps nutrition dialed in without relying on feel
  - Write the plan down before the day starts
    - Proactive scheduling rather than reacting to the day as it unfolds
  - Coaching calls from wherever he is
    - Work and accountability don't pause for location or circumstance
  - Alarm at 5:31 — no snooze
    - A specific, non-round wake time signals intentionality; the no-snooze rule removes the decision entirely
  - Sunrise walk before the world wakes up

    - Early movement and solitude as a grounding ritual before external demands begin
- Read something that makes him better, every day
    - Daily investment in self-improvement through reading, without exception