

A Brilliant $1.6M/Month "Salmon Sperm" Product (Copy This)

Channel: Arie Scherson · Published: Jun 09, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2RLfOA1imJo> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

Korean brand Kahi sells a salmon-DNA (PDRN) skincare stick for $23 and moves 70,000 units/month on Amazon alone — $1.6M/month from one SKU. The ingredient is a sourceable commodity at ~$1.40/unit, making private-label entry fast and high-margin.

Contents

-  What PDRN Is and Why It's Going Viral
-  Market Size and Trend Data
-  The Kahi Case Study — $1.6M/Month from One SKU
-  Sourcing the Product: Alibaba and Private Label
-  The Launch Plan: Shopify Store Setup
-  Positioning and Messaging Strategy
-  Honest Disclaimers and Caveats
-  Tools and Resources Mentioned

What PDRN Is and Why It's Going Viral 0:22

- The active ingredient is PDRN (Polydeoxyribonucleotide), marketed as "sodium DNA"
 - Extracted from salmon sperm — hence the viral "salmon sperm" hook
 - Salmon DNA is structurally similar enough to human DNA that skin treats it as familiar
 - Acts as a signal that prompts the skin to repair itself
- Widely described in research as a gentler alternative to retinol
 - Retinol has been one of the biggest skincare ingredient trends in recent years; PDRN is positioned as the next evolution
- Origins: started as a clinical ingredient used in facials and micro-needling treatments
 - Celebrities were publicly discussing it roughly a year ago
- The inflection point: Korean brands figured out how to formulate it into a $23 mass-market stick product
- Virality is two-layered:
 - The weird name ("salmon sperm") drives clicks and video engagement

- The real science keeps people interested and drives repeat purchase

Market Size and Trend Data 1:31

- Search volume for PDRN has surpassed 360,000 monthly searches
- Trend trajectory described as "going up and to the right with healthy corrections" — analogous to a strong stock chart
 - Arie frames dips in the trend as "buying the dip" opportunities
- The PDRN trend is the macro trend; the "stick bomb" format is a fast-growing micro-trend within it
 - Stick bombs are the specific product format Kahi dominates

The Kahi Case Study — $1.6M/Month from One SKU 1:55

- Brand: Kahi — described as the current category leader, largely undiscussed in the creator's circles
- Sales on Amazon: 70,000 units in the past month at ~$23/unit
 - Equates to approximately $1.6 million/month on Amazon alone
 - Shopify Labs tool estimated closer to $2.1M/month across channels; Arie uses the conservative Amazon figure
- This revenue comes from a single SKU
- Key insight: Kahi did not invent PDRN and does not own it
 - PDRN is a commodity ingredient that originated in Korea
 - Anyone can formulate and sell a competing product legally

Sourcing the Product: Alibaba and Private Label 2:42

- Search term on Alibaba: "PDRN bomb"
 - Multiple suppliers appear offering products that closely mirror what top brands sell on TikTok Shop and Amazon
- Example unit cost: $1.40 per unit at 1,000-unit minimum order quantity (MOQ)
 - Margin spread between $1.40 cost and $23 retail is described as "absolutely massive"
- Common misconception: you do NOT need 10,000 units to start a private-label brand
 - Many suppliers will customize products (logo, packaging) at much lower MOQs
 - Allows a competitor to go to market in weeks instead of months
- Recommended workflow using a sourcing agent:
 - Step 1 — Find the Alibaba supplier you want to work with
 - Step 2 — Connect them with Team Drop (sourcing agent; contactable via WhatsApp)
 - Step 3 — Team Drop handles negotiations, secures best prices and lowest MOQs
 - Step 4 — Team Drop warehouses your inventory and ships orders worldwide

- Arie's framing: "The product itself is not the hard part. It's literally sitting right there. The hard part — and the part that's actually worth a lot of money — is everything after the product."

The Launch Plan: Shopify Store Setup 4:12

- Platform of choice: Shopify
 - Reasons: cheap, clean, fast, consumer trust, can be live in ~10 minutes
 - Shopify deal available: $1/month for 90 days (linked in description)
- Store structure: single-product store
 - One product, clean layout, premium aesthetic — the skincare category "lives and dies on looking premium"
 - Avoid clutter or busy design elements
- Design tips:
 - Choose a nice, clean font
 - Use a minimal, premium theme
 - Arie mentions a free theme he uses personally on stores that have hit over $1,000/day within weeks — linked in video description
- Arie built a demo Shopify store from zero to show the concept is executable
 - Initial build took ~20 minutes
 - A couple of additional hours to refine using the Shoppilab store builder
 - Conclusion: "The products are sourceable, the store takes an afternoon to get built, and the trend is already moving exponentially."

Positioning and Messaging Strategy 4:37

- Do NOT lead with "salmon sperm" on the store itself
 - That framing works for video hooks and social engagement — it does NOT drive purchase conversion
- Recommended on-store positioning:
 - "Regenerative Korean skincare"
 - "The more gentle retinol"
 - Leverage awareness of the retinol trend as a reference point; present PDRN as the next/better mechanism
- Strategy: use product-aware audiences from adjacent major trends to introduce a new mechanism
- The split:
 - Weird name → sells the video / drives engagement
 - Clean, science-backed story → sells the product

Honest Disclaimers and Caveats 6:06

- Fish allergy warning is required — PDRN is derived from salmon; this must be disclosed prominently on the store and packaging, never hidden
- Over-the-counter formulations are generally less potent than clinical-grade PDRN treatments
 - "It's not magic, obviously" — but the category does not need to be magic to generate strong demand
- Arie explicitly states he has not built a PDRN brand himself and is not claiming Kahi-level results
- His current focus: a supplement brand growing rapidly, his paid ads agency/consultancy (over $1M/month in ad spend managed; holds Meta's highest-tier partner status, claimed by fewer than 1% of Meta advertisers), and eventually investing in or funding brands he helps launch

Tools and Resources Mentioned 6:50

- Kahi — benchmark brand; search on Amazon to study their listing
- Alibaba.com — source suppliers by searching "PDRN bomb"
- Team Drop — recommended sourcing agent; contact via WhatsApp; handles negotiations, warehousing, worldwide fulfillment
- Shopify — recommended store platform; $1/month for 90 days deal linked in description
- Shoppilab — Arie's store-builder platform; spots available; free theme linked in description
- Shopify Labs — third-party revenue estimation tool (cited $2.1M/month for Kahi)
- Free Shopify theme — the one Arie uses on personal stores that hit $1,000+/day; linked in description