Show people what you're building. The right ones will want in.

Channel: Greg Lav · Published: Nov 12, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/ujj-OcGxu18 Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

The best way to build a team is to publicly document your work. Top talent will organically reach out through DMs — no need to reveal every secret, just show the journey.

📑 Contents

- 🏗️ Build Your Team Through Content
- 💡 You Don't Have to Reveal Everything

🏗️ Build Your Team Through Content 0:00

- The question posed: what is the best way to build a team?
- The core advice: start posting content about what you're building
  - Some of the best hires they ever made came from people who reached out directly via DMs after seeing the content
  - Documenting your work publicly acts as a talent magnet — motivated, aligned people self-select and come to you
- The specific example discussed: moving TikTok products/content over to Instagram
  - This strategy seems obvious once you hear it, but most people haven't thought of it
  - Sharing this kind of insight publicly signals expertise and attracts like-minded collaborators

💡 You Don't Have to Reveal Everything 0:23

- A common hesitation is giving away your "secrets" — the advice directly addresses this
  - You are not required to expose every detail of how you succeed
  - Simply documenting the process and the journey is enough
- The natural outcome: people watching will say "I love what this person is doing — how do I get involved?"
  - This creates inbound interest from potential team members who are already bought in on your vision

> The best talent won't come from job postings — they'll come from people who already believe in what you're building before they ever apply.