Baseball Should Be Three Innings

Channel: Brandon Carter · Published: Oct 19, 2026 · Watch: https://www.youtube.com/shorts/hwTT9YL6NX8 Source: full transcript

📋 Executive Summary

Brandon Carter makes a quick case for shrinking baseball to three innings and 30-minute games for better entertainment, then briefly reminisces about growing up a White Sox fan in Chicago.

📑 Contents

- ⚾ The Case for Three-Inning Baseball
- 🏙️ Chicago Baseball Loyalty and Childhood Memories

⚾ The Case for Three-Inning Baseball 0:00

- Brandon's core proposal: baseball should be cut down to three innings
  - His reasoning: it would make the sport more entertaining
  - He estimates three-inning games would run about 30 minutes
  - He expresses he could "get behind" that format
- He draws a clear line at the current nine-inning format: "nine innings of baseball — no, I'm not watching that"

🏙️ Chicago Baseball Loyalty and Childhood Memories 0:00

- Growing up in Chicago, he notes you have to pick a side: south side means you're a White Sox fan
- Highlights memorable players from his childhood White Sox era:
  - Frank Thomas — a standout he remembers fondly
  - Bo Jackson — was on the team briefly ("for a minute"), but still memorable and "dope"
- On the Cubs: "The Cubs sucked when I was a kid" — but he acknowledges they eventually won (referencing the Cubs' 2016 World Series title)